HIGHWAY DEPT. HAS SURPRISES READY FOR LAW VIOLATORS

Patrol of Mounted Officers Is About Ready; Have Your Lamps All Trimmed and Burning.

MEANING BUSINESS

Harrisburg, Oct. 6. (United Press)—There will be some surprises in store for motorists who defy regulations of the Highway Department and the motor vehicle laws of the state, if they are laboring under the delusion that the new highway patrol has no power, according to Secretary Paul D. Wright.

As long as the Highway Department has supervision of the registration of motor cars, sufficient power can be vested in the highway patrol to keep the highways free from recklessness, and lawlessness, "speed merchants" and road "hogs," it was said at the highway department today.

Any one of the 10,000 employes of the State Highway Department can be deputized by Secretary Wright to serve notice on violators of the rules of driving under the new law, it was stated, and for sufficient cause the license of the driver can be revoked. This penalty, if applied in cases where indifference is shown, it was pointed out, will soon rid the roads of the menace to automobile driving at the present time.

The inconsiderate driver who "bumps off" a passing machine and escapes unharmed will not escape under the rigid supervision to be exercised by the new force of patrolmen under Secretary Wright. Safety will be strictly observed because, according to Wright "the highways will be unsafe places for violators of the law."

State Troops are training the highway patrol at the school in Colebrook near Mt. Gretna. Nearly a hundred men are taking the course to equip them in the methods used by special police. Within a few weeks they will be ready for action.

Some of the infractions of highway regulations to be specially observed are: Parking along improved sections of the state highway; passing other vehicles on hills and curves; lamps out of focus or with high candlepower overloaded trucks; unlicensed operators drivers who prevent operation of two-way traffic and those who drive under the influence of liquor.

Measles and Whooping Cough Giving Concern To Health Department

There were six cases of measles, five of whooping cough and one of scarlet fever reported to the local Board of Health during the past seven days, according to the report of Health Secretary J. S. Gaulin.

There was one death during the week as the result of an attack of whooping cough.

There are at the present time a total of thirty-seven cases of communicable diseases under quarantine in the town. Of this total twenty-seven are whooping cough. These cases are located as follows:

1st Ward—Whooping Cough, 7.

2nd Ward—Typhoid fever,1; Scarlet Fever, 1; Diphtheria, 1; Whooping Cough, 2.

3rd Ward—Scarlet Fever,1;Whooping Cough 13.

4th Ward—Measles, 6; Whooping Whooping Cough, 5.

LAUGHMAN—DIVELY

James E. Baughman, of Osceola Mills, and Miss Emma Dively, of Karthaus, were married on Saturday September 29th. The wedding took place at the Methodist parsonage in Bellefonte, Rev. E. E. McKelvey performing the ceremony. Both are popular young people, and will have the best wishes of their many friends.

R. H. Sterling, of Osceola Mills, Pa., formerly Superintendent of the Osceola Silica & Fire Brick Co., has accepted a position with the United States Refractories Co. and expect to locate in Clearfield in the near futur.

FOURTH ASSAULT ON THREE MURDERERS PROVES A FAILURE

Eddyville, Ky., Oct. 6.—Soldiers attempting to drive three convicts from their stronghold in the penitentiary today launched a fourth campaign of machinegun and rifle fire against the crumbling walls of the state prison mess hall where the men are barricaded.

Preparations for blasting the prisoners from their fortress with dynamite were broken off under orders from the State Board of Charities and Corrections. The attacking force directed their fire at a large breach in the north end of the two-story mess hall. Their chief hope of ending the siege today is that they may be able to batter the walls in upon the convicts.

Intermittent fire came from the dining hall at dawn today. Prison authorities state they believe two of the convicts are either dead or seriously wounded. Military rule was in force at the prison this morning. The declaration followed the visit of the Charities Board here last night. Reporters were barred from their press room inside the walls. News bulletins were given out at the prison gates.

Warden John Chilton said members of his staff claimed to have seen inside of the upper floor of the mess hall with field glasses. One of the convicts was said to have been seen moving about the room. Two other men were lying on the floor.

The ring surrounding the small fortress into which Monte Walters, Lawrence Griffith and Harry Farland fled early Wednesday morning, after killing three guards and wounding another in a break for liberty, was increased to 50 men during the night.

MORE SALOONMEN IN PHILADELPHIA GIVE UP TO DRY RULING

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.—Threats of criminal prosecution and "padlock injunctions against saloons which have continued to operate in defiance to "go out of business" notices, signed by United States Attorney General Daugherty and State Attorney General Woodruff, resulted in the voluntary closing of more barrooms today.

Approximately 50 of Philadephia's 1,300 saloons have heeded the warning to dismantle their bars, remove swinging doors and close up.

PUNXSY MAN NAMED TO THE P. S. C. BY GOV. PINCHOT

Harrisburg, Oct., 5.—Lex N. Mitchell, a prominent attorney of Punxsutawney, yesterday was appointed as a member of the Public Service Commisison by Governor Pinchot to serve a ten year term.

Mr. Mitchell's appointment will have to be confirmed by the Legislature of 1925. The new commissioner will take the place of John S. Rilling, of Erie, whose term expired.

Two other vacancies exist on the commission, that of Milton J. Brecht, of Lancaster, term expired, and that of John W. Reed, of Clearfield, who will continue until his successor is named.

STATE POLICEMAN FRUSTRATES JAIL DELIVERY AT YORK

York, Pa., Oct. 6.—Another outbreak in the York county prison in an attempted jail delivery was frustrated early today by state police.

A number of the prisoners, recently transferred from the Eastern Penitentiary owing to crowded conditions there, succeeded in getting from the third floor tier to the fourth floor of the jail.

Sergt. Walter Stillwell, of the state police, discovered one of the convict crawling through a window where the bars had been sawed. Others were discovered in the act of escaping and they were forced back at the point of drawn revolvers.

MRS. MARGARET SPENCE'S FUNERAL

Mrs. Margaret Spence, whose death occurred at her home in Curwensville yesterday will be buried from the Curwensville Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Spence had many friends in Clearfield, who were extremely sorry to learn of this good woman's passing away.

Proper obituary notice will be found in the Curwensville column elsewhere in this paper.

ESHELMAN—HEMMES

Marshall Edwards Eshelman, of Woodland, Pa., and Mrs. Eva Mae Hemmes, of Clearfield were united in marriage by Rev. J. Merrill Williams at Trinity Methodist parsonage Lock Haven at noon October 4, 1923 They will reside at Woodland.

Gosh, What a Big Lawn

That's what Laddie Buck, successor to Laddie Boy, is probably thinking. He's just arrived at the White House, and is seen photographed with Colonel M. C. Buckey, a cousin of the donor, who is Miss Marguerite Calhoun of Atlanta, Ga.

HEADLESS MAN IS IDENTIFIED AS A KITTANNING YOUTH

Pittsburgh, Oct. 6.—Positive identification of the South Side murder victim, who was beheaded, as Charles McGregor, formerly of Kittanning, was made today at the county morgue.

R. H. Bixby of Pittsburgh, a former employer of McGregor, and Mark Williams, a clerk in the Internal Revenue office at the Federal building both identified the body as that of McGregor. Neither Bixby nor Williams could throw any light on the murder mystery, which was uncovered when the headless body was found in a girl's dressing room at the South Side municipal swimming pool last Wednesday.

Both Bixby and Williams characterized McGregor as a youth of "roving" disposition.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 6.—"That is my son."

J. E. McGregor, special patrolman at Mesta Machine Company, West Homestead, thus made positive identification of the South Side headless [illegible] of Charles "Chuck" McGregor of Kitanning, Pa.

The father said he had not heard from his son for several months. The last he heard of him he was in Detroit. His son was 21 years old, the father said.

McGregor could throw no light on the murder. In fact he said he had no knowledge his son was in this section of the country.

Five other persons, four chums of the slain youth and a former employe of Kittanning, also identified the body as that of McGregor.

The first clue as to the probable identity of the victim was furnished by Miss Inda West of Punxsutawney, at present a student nurse at Jefferson hospital, Philadelphia. She identified copies of photographs found in the clothing as ones she had sent to McGregor in Detroit several months ago.

County Controller Grant Thompson Seriously Ill; Stricken Last Evening

The many friends throughout the county of County Controller Grant H. Thompson will be grieved to learn that he suffered a paralytic stroke last evening and is quite seriously ill at his home on Front street. One side is completely paralyzed and he had not regained consciousness up to noon today.

Mr. Thompson returned last evening on the 6:45 Pennsylvania train from the state convention of County Commissioners at Washington, Pa., where he had been since Tuesday. He had reached the walk turning into his home off the main sidewalk when felled by the stroke.

Mrs. Thompson, not expecting her husband home until a later train, had gone to the picture show and upon returning along about 9 o'clock found Mr. Thompson lying in the yard along side the walk. He was taken into the home and a physician summoned but despite all that medical skill could do he remains in a rather serious condition.

His many friends hope to learn of Mr. Thompson's speedy recovery.

VICTIM OF PECULIAR ACCIDENT

William Brodish, a 12 year-old Winburne boy, is in the Cottage State Hospital, Philipsburg, suffering from injuries received in a peculiar manner. The lad was at the table when something attracted his attention outside, and getting up he started to run across the room, tripped and fell and the tines of a table fork he was carrying pierced his side, inflicting an ugly wound.

Berlin, Oct. 6.—The formation of the new cabinet by Chancellor Stresemann was completed this afternoon. The portfolio of finance, will be filled by Herr Schacht. The other offices remained the same.

DR. RACHEL READ WRITES RELATIVES, TELLING OF QUAKE

Dr. Rachel Read, sister of Mrs. M. J. Owens, A. H. and Samuel C. Read, who has long been located in Japan, and who lost all her possessions in Tokio during the earthquake, fire and tidal wave, but who escaped personal injury by reason of having been out of the city at her country home in the mountains, wrote the following letter to Mrs. Owens, which was received today:

Wednesday, Sept. 5, 1923.

Dear Sister and all my family:

Whether this ever reaches you or not I cannot be sure, but will write anyway, for I am sure your papers are telling you of the awful earthquake and fire, and you will be yearning to know details. I am safe and sound here, and grateful for a roof and food, but everything I possessed in Tokyo has gone up in smoke. It is San Francisco over again only if anything worse. The quake here in Karizawa was awful. Will write as soon as I can get it away. A messenger is waiting to carry this to Kobe, the nearest point we can post anything to the U. S. A.

Yokohama is nearly all demolished and burned. Ships are carrying those who are left to Kobe. There is no way to get between Tokyo and Yokohama except to walk.

No railway south of Tokyo until you get to Numazu. The soldiers have taken possession of Tokyo and are doing all they can to clear away the dead, care for the wounded and provide food for the living.

I am a little dazed, as yet. I do not know what to do, but when I can get my finances straightened up I will go home. Of course I will not go to India and Europe as I wrote you last week, but when or if at all, one can get any money remains to be seen. In the meantime we will stay here, and as there is no 23 Reinanzaka (her Tokyo address) any more, I suppose the mail will continue to be sent here. I am not sure whether the central post office was burned or not.

Poor Koma (Dr. Reed's maid) does not know what has become of her family. They lived in Tsukiji and it is entirely swept by fire. She has kept up until today, when she has given away, poor soul.

We just watch the bulletin board for news, and if anyone who ventured into Tokyko returns we surround him like vultures—news vultures. Dr. Reischauer went down to Tokyo to see about Mrs. McNair and Miss Wess. Found them all right and not burned out.

The Meiji Gakuin and Joshi Gakuin are both saved, but the American embassy and all about it are burned.

The Episcopal mission has suffered the most, as their schools, hospitals and cathedral are all gone in Tsukiji (pronounced Skoo).

I could write on and on, but will stop now and as I know more definitely will write again. Kindly send this on to the rest of the family and tell them I will write them soon.

With love,

RACHEL.

The earthquake occurred at 12 o'clock, Saturday, Sept. 1st.

GYPSIES PLAY OLD GAME HERE BUT ARE CAUGHT BY QUICK CHASE OVER HIGHWAYS; STOLE $27.00 IN GARAGE

A gang of gypsies under the leadership of Steve Zibo, of 316 Holster street, Chicago, according to the county license he holds, which has been through this section several times the past summer, a part of which outfit was on the carnival midway at the Fair, dropped into the Studebaker garage on Daisy street last evening about 6:45 for the ostensible purpose of buying five gallons of gasoline. The whole gang crowded into the office of the garage and remained there while Mr. Estep was securing the gas at the curb pump.

When placing the money received for the gas in the cash register, which was located in the office, Mr. Estep saw the register had the appearance of having been sifted out by a hurricane. Quickly checking up the register the garage man found it was $27 short.

Mr. Estep immediately got in touch with Chief of Police McMullen and told the chief what had happened. Chief McMullen got busy and notified the officers of all surrounding towns and learning that the gypsies had left Clearfield in the direction of DuBois, Chief McMullen, Officer Woolridge and Mr. Estep started out in a car in pursuit of them. They ran out to the Reams watering trough but were unable to find any trace of them. A party of DuBois people happened along about this time and they gave the officers the location of the gypsy camp, which was on the Curwensville-Grampian detour at the Porter farm.

The party then made their way back to the camp and routed out four men and one woman Mr. Estep identified as having been in the office just before he discovered the loss of his money. The gypsies protested their innocence but when told they would have to come back to Clearfield, Zibo weakened and produced the $27 Mr. Estep claimed to have lost.

There was a bunch of eight or ten children in the outfit and believing their room was much to be preferr to their company Chief McMullen decided not to make any arrests, but notified Zibo to stay away from Clearfield in the future as their arrest would follow their appearance in the town, even traveling through.

FOUR CLEARFIELD COUNTY GIRLS OF TENDER AGE ENTICED TO HUNTINGDON BY CARNIVAL MEN HERE ON FAIR WEEK

GIRLS NEGLECTED

HELD AS WITNESSES

The following article is taken from the Huntingdon Daily News and explains in part at least why the health and police authorities of the state condemn the disreputable carnival aggregations which prey upon the pocketbooks, morals and public health of the few communities they are yet allowed to infest in Pennsylvania:

County detective W. L. Hoover and Chief of Police O. G. Garner conducted raids on two rooming houses in Huntingdon this morning at 4 o'clock and arrested Richard Brown, 21, Warren, Pa; Arthur Feltman, 30, New York City; Henry Pierce, 35, Erie; William Wright, 24, East Liverpool, Ohio; Helen Lucas, 15, Winburne; Clara Shaffer, 18, Clearfield; Betty Davis, 16, Munson; Marie Brickley, 15, Beihtown.

The double quartet dropped into the town the fore part of this week with the carnival now exhibiting in Smithfield. The girls were enticed away from home while the carnival was playing at the Clearfield Fair last week.

Arthur Feltman and Marie Brickley were passing under the assumed names of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jones; Richard Brown and Betty Davis, Henry Pierce and Clara Shaffer, and William Wright and Helen Lucas also were posing as man and wife.

The arrests were the result of information obtained by the officers, since their arrival in Huntingdon.

The girls were without coats and hats, and [illegible] wearing apparel, and [illegible] bundle.

A hearing was held this morning at 9:30 before Squire Lowe. Kirk and [illegible] were bounded over to the next term of court on the charge of enticing young girls away from home for immoral purposes. Additional charges of adultery will be brought against Feltman and Pierce, it having been brought out at the hearing that they are married men.

The girls are being detained as material witnesses.

ROTARIANS DAVIS AND HILE TO VISIT HIGH SCHOOL TUES.

The Rotary Club at its last meeting having decided to accept the invitation cuered by Prof Diener, principal of the High School, and City Supt. Zerfoss to visit the High School, President Stewart evolved a plan yesterday for selecting the members whose duty it will be to make a weekly trip to the school. It was decided to select two Rotarians each week for this work. One will be called upon to speak to the school, while it will be the duty of the other one to visit and inspect the manual training and domestic science departments and make report on same at the next club meeting. None will be excused and everyone must serve when called upon or drafted for this really worth-while service.

In making his selections the president had the names of all the members written on slips of paper, placed them in a hat and then had the two "lucky ones" pulled out.

Next week's assignment falls to Pearl T. Davis and Thornton Hile. Davis is scheduled to do the Demosthenes act, while Hile will carefully inspect the different departments of the High School and report at the next meeting of the club.

Guardsmen Withdrawn In Walton's War Against State's Fancied Enemies

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 6.—Demobilization of national guardsmen on duty in Oklahoma City where Governor Walton has concentrated his military law battle with the Ku Klux Klan, was announced today by Acting Adjutant General Charles Barrett.

Dismissal of the troops does not mean there has been any change made in the status of the state-wide martial law, Barrett said.

Guards will be maintained only in those cities where military courts are in session, it was explained. Soldiers here were withdrawn during the night.

ODD FELLOWS TO MEET IN CLEARFIELD NEXT YEAR

The Allegheny Region Anniversary association, I. O. O. F. held the second quarterly meeting of its third fiscal year at Johnstown on Wednesday evening, October 3rd, with about 400 delegates present from the eleven counties covered by the association. It was not only a pleasant occasion but good work was accomplished. Clearfield was selected for the January meeting.

"I WAS GIVEN BLUE TABLETS," SAID MRS. WEBB BEFORE DEATH

New York, Oct. 6.—"I was given blue tablets." These last words of Mrs. Gertie Gorman Webb, uttered shortly before she died of a mysterious malady, will be placed before the White Plains Grand Jury, which is investigating to decide whether she was murdered, it was learned today.

Dr. Wm. J. Meyer, who attended Mrs Webb in her final illness, is expected to go before the Jury next Monday and repeat the death bed conversation he had with the woman.

The report of Dr. Alexander G. Gettler, the toxicologist who examined Mrs. Webb's organs for indications of poison, resulted in discovery of mercury in the liver, brain and kidneys. Dr. Gettler however could not state definitely if this poison caused death as it was in very small quantities. Furthermore, he could not say positively if it was bichloride of mercury. Dr. Gettler's report has been place before District Attorney Arthur Rowland of Westchester County, who is examining it in detail. He will submit it to the Grand Jury later.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

The Pennsylvania State Highway Department aims to keep a much closer tab on the improved highways of the State in the future than has been the case in the past, if one is to judge from an order recently promulgated by State Highway Commissioner Wright and which is scheduled to go into effect October 15th.

It is the plan of the Highway Commissioner to keep close supervision of the highways in order that the number of accidents on same may be reduced to the lowest possible level.

The chief instrument to be used in this supervisory work is the new Highway Patrol, better known as Wright's "Eunuch Cavalry" the "mounted patrol" asked for by Highway Department which was "dehorned" by the "wets" in the Legislature, who were able to strike out of the bill creating the patrol all power or authority to make arrests. The Highway Patrol are therefore able to watch and tell on anybody violating the rules, but they can't do anything themselves hence the sobriquet "Eunuch Patrol"

The patrol will be made up of hard-riding loud cursing, prying-into individuals who will keep tab on all violations of the motor law, such as speeding, passing another car on a curve, parking on State road driving without lights, with but one light, or without a drivers' license. Names and license numbers of all offenders will be taken by the "Eunuchs" and turned over to the State police or some other officer who can properly function and arrest in all cases will follow:

In addition to this unique organization, all the "potato bug" and "Japanese beetle" and "dog tax" policemen now infesting the State, will also be authorized to guard and supervise the highways, when the potato bugs, beetles and taxless canines are not devouring the proletariat, these latter individuals having power to arrest violators of the traffic laws on sight.

In addition to the above new angles in the Department's campaign to make Pennsylvania's highways safe for democracy and our large Republican majority, every employe of the Highway Department is appointed on a sort of "smelling committee" and it will be their duty to smell out every accident on the highway and report same at once, with all the details to the Highway Department at Harrisburg

The State Police, as usual, will be the chief supervisors of the highway in the matter of looking after violators of the law. The new regulations should accomplish untold good and be the means of saving many lives. They should have the support of all good citizens.

Through the efforts of the Cook Forest association, composed of prominent men and women of the state, the Cook tract of 8,000 acres ,of which 200 acres is covered with virgin white pine, the one species of tree indigenous to Pennsylvania, will be presented to the state and preserved.

This tract of trees, which lies at the meeting point of Clarion, Jefferson and Forest counties, is the last considerable stand of the virgin white pine trees east of the Rocky Mountains. For years efforts have been made to have the legislature purchase this land, but the state has not seen its way clear to provide the necessary appropriation.

Notices are being sent out from the office of the state game commission at Harrisburg relative to the hunting hours, hours for the sport being announced. The notice follows:

"Under the old law shooting or hunting between sunset and sunrise, except for raccoons, was specifically prohibited. The Legislature saw fit to extend the hours of shooting in the new game code, and under the new law it is legal to hunt for or kill wild turkeys only between sunrise and sunset, and all other kinds of game may be hunted for and killed from one half hour before sunrise until one-half hour after sunset. Raccoons may be hunted at any time during the night.

Oysters change their sex three or four times a year, and frequently oftener, according to investigations which the Danish scientist, Spaarck, made at the Limfjord experimental station. The Danish investigator has discovered that the phenomenon is brought about by changes in the temperature of the water in which the bivalves live. His conclusions are said to have been corroborated in the main by experiments made at Plymouth by Orton, an English scientist. Who wants to be an oyster?

HIGH—BAILEY

Leroy A. High and Miss Elsie Sarah Bailey, highly popular local young people, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony at the First Methodist church in McConnellsburg, Pa. at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Harry Jarrett, a friend of the groom

The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Orin C. Frank, of Clearfield, Mrs. Frank being a sister of the bride. Following the ceremony the happy couple departed by automobile for a short wedding trip after which they will be at home to their friends at 121 Weaver street.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Minerva High, of New Millport, and a dependable young man, holding a responsible position with Kurtz Bros. His bride is a daughter of Mrs. J. L. Bailey of West Fifth Avenue. She held the position of stenographer at the Clearfield National Bank for a number of years, and is one of Clearfield's finest young women. May health, wealth and happiness be their portion is the wish of the happy young couple's legion of friends.

Lower Prices on the Brand New True Blue Oakland Closed Cars!

Only the complete facilities and resources of Oakland, a division of General Motors, permit these quality-built, six-cylinder closed cars, with Fisher bodies, to be sold at such unusually low prices.

Smooth and quiet performance, of a kind hitherto found only in the costliest cars, is achieved by Oakland's brand new engine. The very ultimate measure of safety is insured by Oakland's sound, practical and simple four-wheel brakes. Nowhere is there the slightest compromise with sturdiness, comfort, power, or any other quality essential to the finest closed car.

You must actually see these closed cars to appreciate fully how far they surpass all others at anywhere near their remarkably low prices. Won't you stop in today and inspect them?

MOTHER OF LARGE FAMILY

Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Other Mothers

Windom, Minn.—"I was so run-down that I was just good for nothing. I was to become the mother of my ninth child, and I thought I did not have the strength to go through with it. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has surely done all I could ask it to do and I am telling all my friends about it. I have a nice big baby girl and am feeling fine. You may use this letter to help other sick mothers." — Mrs. C. A. MOEDE, Box 634, Windom, Minn.

My First Child

Glen Allen, Alabama.—"I have been greatly benefited by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for bearing-down feelings and pains. I was troubled in this way for nearly four years following the birth of my first child, and at times could hardly stand on my feet. A neighbor recommended the Vegetable Compound to me after I had taken doctor's medicines without much benefit. It has relieved my pains and gives me strength. I recommend it and give you permission to use my testimonial letter."—Mrs. IDA RYE, Glen Allen, Alabama.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Rustice Higby, attorney and friend of Ranger, assists in the search. James Charlie, adventurer, and life-long friend of Loring, comes with a message from Hope's abductors. It is sent to Charlie with instructions to tell his friend to buy a hat for Hope and leave it at a specified place.

Charlie tells Loring that his daughter is in the hands of a group of criminals called the Combine. Frank Bryan is Ranger's private secretary. George Kelsey is detained at a private sanitarium.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

It was disappointing for Kelsey to find that he had only a stray sheet of a Sunday supplement two or three weeks old, entirely taken up with the disappearance of a girl called Hope Ranger and illustrated with pictures of her reproduced from photographs, paintings and sketches.

The sense of some one being near him rather than the perception of an actual presence roused him finally from his brown study.

A girl was standing a few feet away from him, regarding him steadily, her hands clasped before her.

The involuntary smile of recognition died on his lips as he stood up. He had thought at first—a resemblance only, but to whom? Where had he seen—recently? He grasped it. One of the nurses, Miss Copely. He had talked to her the day before.

But he had now a swift impression of grace and charm, of a distinction which the nurse did not possess.

"Good morning," he broke the silence which was becoming awkward. "For a moment I thought you were Miss Copley."

"Did you?" she asked vaguely. Her voice confirmed the impression of charm. It was warm, faintly vibrating.

"Miss Copely is a nurse here," he explained. "She resembles you very much. I thought she might be your sister."

She came nearer him and sat down on the bench, motioning him to resume his seat.

"Are you a patient here, too?"

Kelsey had an uncertain temper which he had taught himself to control; but at her question a flare of anger swept over his face, which slowly congealed to an icy repression.

"Am I a patient?" He had turned in his seat, and she saw that the flame still lingered in his hot blue eyes. There were white dents about the corners of his mouth; his voice was rough; the inflections were satirical. "Well, that is as you look at it. I was house physician here for a few weeks. I resigned—for reasons. My resignation was accepted, and I packed my things and prepared to leave. I needed a car to take me to the station, as it was some distance. There were polite excuses—all the cars were in use. I started to walk, hoping I'd get a lift on the road, the gates were locked. I attempted to throw my bags over the wall and scramble after them. Two men closed in on me. I lost my head and struck out, but they were too much for me. Our superintendent had grown so fond of me, you see, that he couldn't bare to part. So he elevated me to the rank of patient. I am still here—for the present."

"That means—you intend to get away?" she leaned nearer him to whisper.

"I'm talking nonsense," he began stiffly; but she touched him lightly on the arm.

"Dr. Bristow is coming," she murmured. "Give me a pencil quick, and wait here. I will come back—if I can."

Wondering alike at the quick change in her manner and at the purpose of her request, he gave her the pencil, and she moved away, to stand listlessly turning it in her hands and looking vacantly before her.

The superintendent of the institution came striding across the lawn toward them.

As always, he was fastidiously dressed—a gray morning suit and a gray soft hat. The luster of a splendid black pearl shone in his mauve necktie.

"Well, Miss Copley"—he stopped before the girl and spoke in the sympathetic, slightly bantering tone of a physician to a convalescent patient—"this is better than moping over rejected manuscripts, don't you think?"

She still stared before her.

"He gave me this pencil," she said; "but he wouldn't give me any paper." She moved on droopingly toward the house.

"Good morning, Kelsey." Dr. Bristow's voice was low. It was said that he had never been heard to raise it above that modulated pitch. To do so was unnecessary; it was sufficiently authoritative without emphasis. "You have been making friends with Miss Copley, I see."

The remark was casual, but Kel-

sey divined undercurrents.

"Is that her name?" he asked uninterestedly. "I thought it might be. Sisters?"

The doctor's eyes were on him.

"Yes—a sad case. Hopeless, I fear. She wanted to be a writer. I have seen some of her manuscripts. Pretty bad. There was one fair story, though, of a little seamstress who fell in love with an actor's picture. He played Mercutio. That was one of your favorite parts, I believe."

"You're in one of your inventive moods today," Kelsey said insolently.

"Have you entirely forgotten the hit you made in that part?" Bristow was now, as Kelsey expressed it to himself, baiting him for fair. "Can't you recall the duel scene where you stagger back into the arms of your supporters, the house still? 'Tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door, but 'twill serve. A plague o' both your houses!' Then the thunders of applause."

Kelsey was a little pale from his effort at self-control, his mouth was rigid.

"Who that had ever lived through such an inspiring experience could forget it?" he murmured with exaggerated enthusiasm.

"Good!" Bristow's tone was gratified. "You are coming along nicely, my dear boy."

With a pleasant nod, he turned away and stepped back to the drive where his car was waiting.

Kelsey's face was black as he looked after him. Lost in his resentment and sense of injury, he had forgotten the girl. It was with a start that he realized that she had come back and was seating herself beside him.

"Give me some paper," she said imperatively.

Studying her, curious to see what she would say or do next, Kelsey took a note book from his pocket and, tearing out a few sheets, handed them to her.

She began to write—words, half-words, dots, dashes, anything. Her head was bent over the paper. Any one watching her would have thought her absorbed in her task. But, while she wrote, she talked in a rapid undertone.

"You are an actor," she said accusingly. "I overheard some of the things he said to you. Perhaps you were only acting when you spoke of him to me?"

"I never was an actor," he interrupted harshly. "That's Bristow's little game. I am what I told you, George Kelsey, a physician who has specialized in mental diseases. But who are you? That's more to the point just now. I made a snap diagnosis of you, when I saw you first, as a drug-addict—your pallor, your eyes. But they don't admit them here. Amnesia, then? That means your memory of past events is blotted out. Yet I don't believe, for all you say, that yours is even touched."

CHAPTER VIII

An attendant making his leisurely rounds paused near the rustic bench on which Kelsey and the girl were sitting, and speculatively measured the distance between them and the wall with his eyes.

Kelsey recognized him as one of the men who had hindered his egress when he tossed his luggage over the gate and attempted to climb after it; and meeting that heavy, suspicious glance, lifted his brows and drooped his mouth simulating a bored and weary resignation which was further borne out by his inert, lounging attitude.

The attendant, remembering a painful bruise or so sustained in their brief but animated encounter, twinkled his small eyes, grinned and walked on, deriving a malicious pleasure from ignoring what he took to be Kelsey's S. O. S. call for relief.

The girl paid no attention to either of them. Her head bent over the note-book, she covered its pages with a racing pencil apparently oblivious to everything about her.

"He's gone," murmured Kelsey when the guard had moved out of ear-shot. "Now tell me."

"It's all rather confusing to me," she said at last, evidently hesitating to commit herself; "why I am at this place, I mean, and the reason for keeping me here, and all. And I would like to get things clear. Perhaps it would help, if you would tell me first what you are doing here?"

"Very well," he smiled quizzically; "since you prefer it that way. But if I stop short at any time, you'll understand that it's because some one is coming."

"I won't go into my first meeting with Bristow and all that." He talked rapidly and in short sentences, moving his lips as little as possible. "I came here as an assistant physician, and liked it. The place is splendidly run and up to date. An invaluable experience for me, for a little while anyway. Then one day—no need going into details now—I overheard a conversation between Bristow and a visitor. I didn't listen intentionally of course, but I was in such a position that I couldn't help it. This visitor was describing the theft of a lot of valuable jewels, and consulting Bristow about the best method of disposing of them. And Bristow made no bones about giving his assistance—on a fifty-fifty basis. He laid out a whole scheme, told the fellow just what to do, giving the names of persons and places."

He paused, as if expecting her to question his statement.

"It doesn't surprise me a bit," she said, drawing in her breath sharply. "Bristow discovered me, of course. He ended the conversation short, and sent the man away. He never turned a hair, I'll say that for him; he's great in an emergency. But his eyes, they went through me like a diamond drill."

LESSON FOR OCTOBER 7

ABRAHAM, A BLESSING TO THE WORLD

LESSON TEXT—Gen. 12:1-3; 18: 17-19; 15-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—"In Thee shall all families of the earth be blessed."—Gen. 12:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Being a Blessing to Others.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Man Who Became a Blessing to the World.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Abraham, a Religious Pioneer.

I. Abraham's Ancestors (Josh. 24:2, 14).

Abraham's people were idolaters. Very likely as a young man, he himself worshiped idols. Tradition furnishes us with some interesting stories touching his struggle against idolatry. At any rate his experience was such as to well qualify him to be the head of a people whose God was the Lord. He knew how hopelessly disastrous idolatry was to the morals of the people, and, therefore, would be able to lead them back to God.

II. Abraham's Call (Gen. 12:1, cf. Acts 7:2-3).

God came to him in Ur of the Chaldees and said unto him:

1. "Get thee out of thy country." One is tied to his country with a strong bond. Abraham had lived long enough to have formed strong attachments to his country.

2. "Get thee out from thy kindred." Abraham was not only to leave behind him his native land, but his relatives as well, even his father's house. Since his kindred were idolaters, he must leave them. Abraham was to become a pilgrim, to be without a home. Even in Canaan, the only land he ever owned, was a burial place.

3. "Into the land that I will show thee." He was not told what or where the land was. He went out not knowing whither he went (Heb. 11:8). While he dwelt in tents during his earthly sojourn, yet "he looked for a city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God" (Heb. 11:10). And thus he was a typical believer called out from his family and country, and renouncing idolatry, he walked by faith, testifying to his and succeeding generations to the faithfulness of God. It costs to obey God, but there is an abundant recompense.

III. God's Promise to Abraham (Gen. 12:2-3; 18:17-18).

1. The Father of a Great Posterity (v. 2). This has been literally fulfilled. He was not to go out primarily for what he could get, but for what he could do. The minister and missionary forget their own personal blessings in the supreme joy of their converts who are the fruits of their labor. No name in all history equals that of Abraham in its honorable influence. His is the name of honor among Jews, Mohammedans and Christians. They all acknowledge him as father.

2. A Blessing to Others (vv. 2, 3). He was not only to become great and to share God's blessings, but to be a blessing to others. He has become a blessing to countless multitudes. This is the prevailing law of the spiritual life—being blessed to be a blessing. Those who respond to this law become the very touchstone of God, so precious that God will bless them who bless them and curse those who curse them. God makes common cause with His people. So vitally is He one with them that it is a serious thing to mistreat them. To maltreat God's children is to lift the hand against God. No one who goes against Him can prosper. Not only is this so with reference to willful acts against His children but neglect or refusal to do good to them. Christ regards all acts for or against them as for or against Him.

IV. God Testing Abraham (Gen. 22:2-18).

Abraham's faith was shown in that he obeyed the call of God and left his land and kindred, but his faith reached its highest point in offering Isaac. For many years, he had waited for the fulfillment of God's promise as to his heir. At last that promise was a reality. Abraham's hope was not the ordinary hope which fills the heart of every father, that his name and work may be perpetuated through his son. A new nation and the world's Savior were to spring up from Abraham through this son. Through this great ordeal, his faith responded, enabling him to believe that God would give Isaac back from the dead (Heb. 11:17-19). God tries all His children. The more important, the more severe the trial.

TRINITY METHODIST CHURCH

South Second street.

Bible school, 9:30, with J. C. Arnold, superintendent, begins a quarter's study in missions, having Abraham for the first heroic adventurer. A beyond-the-church writer in the metropolitan secular press, when space thru a strike was almost exclusively valuable in the "Combined New York Newspapers," makes this calm, large appraisement of "The Missionary":

"I make no bones of saying that the Christian Missionary is about the most useful person in the world.

"He is the one figure that gives me the most hope for the world's future.

"The motive that actuates him is the only one I find in the multitude of human motives that gives promise of the eventual peaceable organization of the world."

Full session with missionary program by Superintendent H. B. Powell, Jr. Special offering—last year's $81.64 with 419 present. Report on Rally Day attendance by class percentages from enrollment. Extra music.

Worship—10:45 and 7:30. Expositions of scripture. Morning's study is on well known and oft repeated texts. Evening, a trenchant treatment of creed and deed. A forum study, preceding sermon, on "Crime"—requested.

In the evening worship, for the fall and winter, a forum period will be devoted to study of requested subjects.

Trinity church invites the strangers, week-end visitor, and commercial traveler to worship tomorrow. The ethic of church-going is the individual's definite support and endorsement of all the church represents and promotes. Share our worship this Sunday. Free sittings. Good music.

Business Situation In Pennsylvania Is Well Balanced Says Review

Harrisburg, Oct. 6. (United Press)—Retrenchment in certain industries of the state is causing a slight accumulation of labor on the market which as yet has not reached the stage of widespread unemployment, according to reports from employment offices to the Department of Labor and Industry today.

Orders have been falling off in the skilled trades, it is reported, but the demand for common labor is picking up again.

The calls for office and technical help have been falling off generally and the supply is far in excess of the demand.

Building activity has been brisk throughout the state, according to reports, in anticipation of the cold weather when the seasonal lull sets in.

There was no indication of depression in the employment reports, the situation being explained as balanced there being few calls for workers but not wholesale let outs in the basic industries.

The seasonal farm activity at this time of year has resulted in numerous placements, quite a few women having been sought for grape picking and other harvesting activities.

The mining of coal, both anthracite and bituminous, is now in full swing, the reports show. Bituminous miners are scarce and the demand cannot be filled but there has been no shortage of hard coal miners apparent, the situation in this case, having been interrupted by labor differences which have apparently been adjusted the collieries operating now at full capacity.

The transportation situation is reported normal. Some demand being experienced in Erie, Johnstown, Harrisburg and Scranton. The Pennsylvania Railroad general offices report their labor needs at present are zero.

While prosperity seems to be enjoyed by the wholesale and retail establishments at present, no indication is felt in clothing and manufacturing lines of the "seasonable demand" for goods. The reflection of this good business condition has apparently not reached the manufacturers in the form of orders as yet and when it does there is likely to be another spurt in the commodity lines.

Forms.

It is because of their rigorous form that the ballade and the rondeau have established themselves by the side of the sonnet; and the lyrist who has learned to love them finds in their rigidity no curb on his power of self expression. So in the kindred art of music, the sonata and the symphony are forms each with a law of its own, yet the composer has abundant liberty within the law.—Brander Matthews.

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of Heaven," sayeth the scriptures.

Rev. M. M. Snyder, who recently resigned his position as County Detective when his conference moved him out of the county, truly is following the call of the Master. Rev. Snyder, while he was County Detective, enjoyed a lucrative salary from the county. He also served his congregation and was paid by church. When the call of duty came from another field, though it meant a sacrifice of well over a thousand dollars a year, he answered.

Rev. Snyder is made of the right stuff.

Once more the carnival has left its sordid trail through Clearfield County. How long will we demand the kind of amusement that is furnished by the traveling band of thieves, gamblers, bootleggers and moral lepers such as always attach themselves to the moving carnival?

That is a question that the people of the community themselves must solve. The State Department of Health is doing all it can to point the way. It does not have the co-operation of the agricultural associations of the state as it should.

Associations and celebration managers generally claim the public demands this form of amusement. Is this true?

There is some agency through which the carnival could be cleaned up. Or better yet, cleaned out.

Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation has taken a step which should be followed by the owner of large acreages everywhere. The company holds 24,000 acres of land, much of which has been devoted to re-forestation. Up to this time it has planted 24,000 trees and have cut three million board feet of timber, being careful to take only full grown timber suitable for the use that it is to be put.

The slogan adopted is "No idle acres." Clearfield County has thousands of acres that ought to be put to work.

We are at the end of another busy week. A week full of activity.

Despite the fears entertained for the national weal, the sun shines, the moon still beams and the government reigns at Washington.

Even Oklahoma, which promised to become a seething mass of hatred and prejudice endangering the stabilization of the nation, turns out to be pretty level headed when a crisis looms on the horizon.

It will be ever thus. There isn't really much wrong with this grand old country, whether it be the nation or Pennsylvania, Oklahoma or Clearfield County; Mag... to the contrary notwithstanding.

Political Paragraphs

ODELL HAUSER'S COLUMN

The political market has seemed during the present week to be recovering from the slump that generally sets in when an election brings the close to a period of campaigning. The primary election last month meant in most of the counties of Pennsylvania that electioneering was over for another year and the voters had nothing to do but sit back and confirm the result of the Republican contests. In a few counties, of course, those where there is a good Democratic vote or where an independent fight will be made, this rule does not hold. But those counties are the exception that proves the rule.

So the world of politics has been lethargic. But now it is beginning to spruce up a bit. There have been several incidents during the week that cause the politicians to prick up their ears.

One of them has been the general publication of the news that Senator George Wharton Pepper is anxious to get rid of his job as Republican National Committeeman from Pennsylvania. No one knows why he happened to choose this particular moment to let everyone know about it, but he did.

There is no tremendous news significance in that fact of itself. Those who know the inside of state politics know that Senator Pepper has for some time wanted to wish himself out of this particular job. For several months now, he has made no secret of his feeling, even if he has not exactly been shouting it from the house-tops.

He went into it in the first place merely as a stop-gap. Under the political conditions which prevailed, it happened that his being named National Committeeman was convenient because he was acceptable to all the Republican factions. Most other men who were thought of would have been opposed by somebody. This was the time that the Pinchot forces had just beaten the organization and they were somewhat inclined to jump over the traces, as was manifested by their attempt to defeat W. Harry Baker for State Chairman, in which they were unsuccessful.

The eyes of the factionalists centered on the office of Republican National Committeeman from Pennsylvania because of recent years it has been the habit for the National Committeeman to be the "boss" of Republican politics in the state.

So, even though it was recognized that with the death of Senator Penrose there could for the moment at least be no "boss" of Pennsylvania politics, the factionalists grew shy at the prospect when confronted with the tradition and were inclined to feel that if any leader of recognized standing were elected to the post, the very fact of his occupying it would tend to increase his prestige and give him too conspicuous a position of leadership.

It was probably this fact, or rather, a realization of how strong its working would be on the minds of the politicians in stiffening their opposition which led the Pinchot forces to abandon the attempt they had been committed to support their own candidate before the State Committee. It was generally understood they had a candidate and more than one shrewd guess has been made at his identity, but they did not bring him forward and the post went to Senator Pepper on the grounds above specified.

Senator Pepper, it is generally recognized, is no politician. He is, like Senator Knox was, interested in broader issues of statesmanship and dislikes the detail of routine politics, amidst which the National Committeeman must live as the representative of his state in national politics. That is why Senator Pepper seeks to get rid of the job, now that it is possible for him to do so.

And why does the Republican state organization deem it expedient to open the question now when it could not before? The answer to that is that in the recent primary elections the organization had a test of its solidarity in standing against the Governor and now believes that it can name the man it desires, regardless of how he may feel about it. So Senator Pepper's desire to open the question of a successor was complied with. It was considered safe to let him do it, where it would not have been so considered before election.

The fashionable thing to do, of course, is to speculate considerably on who will succeed Senator Pepper as National Committeeman. There is a lot of that being done. But if one stops to think that the interesting event does not occur until somewhere along next June, the speculative edge will be dulled for the more sensible. So much can happen between now and next June!

The National Committeeman is chosen by the members of the Republican State Committee. Odinarily the election comes when the Committee holds what is generally its one and only meeting, the meeting of organization that follows the election of the members at the May primary election of even-numbered years. Senator Pepper has announced that he will wait until that time before he separates himself from his job.

It will not, of course, hurt to list the names of the men who are "mentioned" for the impending vacancy. They include former Governor William C. Sproul, Joseph R. Grundy, W. C. Mellon of Pittsburgh, brother of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Senator William S. Vare of Philadelphia.

There is no doubt that Senator Pepper at the present moment would like to hand the position over to ex-Governor Sproul. But there is some doubt as to how Governor Sproul would feel about taking it. He was never distinguished by the desire to meddle in the detail of politics. And anyway, it is a long time before June and many a "dark horse" candidate may be unblanketed before the day comes.

While all this has been going on, Governor Pinchot has been stirring up the animals. There are at least three items of activity to be set down opposite his name on the roll-book. In the first place, he promulgated a very sweeping system of salary standardization in the state government; in the second, he descended upon 1300 saloons in Philadelphia with a new method

A BIRD, A BOY AND A GUN

By FLORENCE DAVILS

A twelve-year old boy and an air gun are a bad combination where birds set up their homes. And if the boy takes up his gun in open warfare against the robin or oriole that happens perched in a green branch above his head, one of the little tragedies of the feathered folk is pretty sure to result. For boys are all too sure of aim in such a case, and the little shining-eyed, full-throated bright-hued creature that was singing his heart out to the sun a moment ago, becomes only a sodden huddle of blood-stained feathers.

If the bird world had its newspapers or bulletin boards, or even its town criers, there would haev been a wide commotion over a piece of news that crept into the world of daily print the other day.

For one of the boys who "didn't think"—or didn't care—paid dearly for his impulse to kill. He shot at a bird, the shot struck a stone, and rebounding, put out one of his own eyes.

Kipling, who wrote the song of Darzee, the tailor bird, would do justice to this odd meting out of retribution. "He though to kill me and deaden my heart beat and the sight of my eyes," the feathered chorister might have exulted. "Now the swift shining bullet has made dark one of his own eyes, so that he will go through life more slowly and cautiously, seeing the sun shine only in part; scarred forever by the shot meant to destroy me."

Cruelty, the child psychologists say, is a natural phase of the earliest years of life, when unreasoning instinct sways the little hands. But even the baby may be made to understand that there is a nursery law against causing needless pain and suffering.

Gardens for the little people, and the chance to become friendly with the birds and butterflies and squirrels that may be enticed among the flowers and trees are helping to make even our young airgun hunters think twice before pulling the trigger. May there be no more bright eyes blinded, either of boy or bird, in the days of better understanding.

WORLD DEMAND FOR AMERICAN MILK

Now distributed to 85 countries and colonies of the world. It has become permanently popular in the Orient. Our milk exports since 1914 over $400,000,000.

The American cow retains her popularity in the Orient despite the neglectful attitude of the Occident. Exports of milk to the Orient in the 7 months ending with August show a marked increase while those to other parts of the world show a decline of nearly one-third, measured in quantities. In the single month of July the milk exports to the Orient increased 60% compared with July of last year, while those to Europe showed a fall off of 35%.

While it was expected—hoped in fact—says the Trade Record of The National City Bank of New York that Europe would regain her ability to supply her own people with this important foodstuff, it is interesting to note that the growth in our exports of milk to the Orient continues, for it is in that part of the world that the demand for condensed and evaporated milk is a permanent one. Density of population and the necessary use of the soil for the production of grain foods leave the Orient, except India where the cow is considered a sacred animal, dependent upon the Occident for its milk supply. China with 400,000,000 people has but 22,000,000 cattle of all classes and a very small proportion utilized for dairy purposes; Japan with a population of over 50,000,000 has but 3½ million cattle of all classes; French Indo-China with 20,000,000 population has less than a quarter of a million cattle. India, where animal life and especially that of the cow is considered sacred by a large element of the population, has more cattle than any other country of the world despite density of population, the number of cattle in India, being, according to latest reports 130,000,000, or nearly double the number in the United States and five times as many as in Argentina, yet our exports of condensed and evaporated milk to India alone in the last five years aggregated over 60,000,000 pounds.

The wonderful development in recent years in the exportation of milk from the United States, in form available for instant and satisfactory use in any part of the world is illustrated by the fact that the total value of exports of milk, condensed or sweetened, evaporated, unsweetened, or reduced to "milk powder" totaled but about $17,000,000 in the decade preceding the war and has exceeded $400,000,000 in the decade since the beginning of the war. The whole world made the acquaintance of American condensed milk during the war period and liked it, and today our exports in the various forms above noted go to 85 different countries, colonies and islands of the world, and continue especially popular in that section of the world which must always import its milk, the Orient.

Curwensville's Own Column

Joseph L. Dale, George street, who has been seriously ill for more than a week, was reported considerably improved yesterday morning.

Editor Joe Fullerton and the succulent bivalve are now sworn enemies so long as life do last. The other evening the editor attended a little family gathering on Bloomington avenue and partook of oysters as a diet. About midnight on his returned home he became ill and was confined to his home the balance of the week.

A "sock" social was held in the Grace Lutheran church last evening the event was as amusing as entertaining. Each one was asked to contribute twice the amount of money as the size of the "sock" or stocking worn by the giver. Some contributions amounted to quite a large sum, it is needless to quote. The entertainment was quite out of line with the usual church socials and was greatly enjoyed by the more than average crowd which attended.

The announcement of the death of Mrs Margaret Spence, was announced Thursday evening at a late hour, occurring at her home on North Locust street. Her demise did not come as a surprise to her many Curwensville friends, as she had been seriously ill for several weeks, yet it cast a shadow of sorrow round and about the community. Deceased was born in 1838, a daughter of Thomas McAdams, who worked for Jno Patton for many years, and was of Scottish descent. In the early seventies she became the second wife of James Spence who died Sept. 24, 1898 the first Mrs Spence Sarah J., passing away Dec 28, 1879.

Mrs Margaret Spence, or "Mother Spence" as she was more familiarly called was a lady of rare christian virtue and attainment, having been a member of the Presbyterian church from early youth until her call came, "Well done thy good and faithful servant, come into the joy of the kingdom of the Lord. Date of funeral has not been learned at this writing.

J. Clyde Gates is improving his residence corner George and Walnut streets.

The heavy and hoary frost of Thursday night crooked about everything in sight that had not been protected by cover.

Travelers can now reach Dubois without detouring via Grampian. The new State Highway from end of State street to Roaring Run was thrown wide open on Thrusday, there by connecting with the dirt road to Anderson Creek hill, and on cut the old Cream Hill turnpike.

From the Altoona Mirror of Thursday we glean the following item of Blair county court news which will be of interest to Curwensville readers of the Progress, as one of the defendants was a former boy of this town:

"There were two cases of conspiracy against M. Dow Kittleberger and Ed. J. Sunderland. These men, it was alleged, had made use of the proceeds of negotiable paper entrusted to them. The defendants were sentenced to make restitution within ten days and pay the costs."

Read what W. J. Bryan has to say of the Williams Colored Singers who will entertain in the M. E. church Thursday evening, Oct. 11. "I have heard the Williams' Jubilee Singers a number of times at Chautauqua during the past seven years and take pleasure in commending their work. They give excellent satisfaction and are people of good character and standing."

In order to have head stones placed on Oak Hill cemetery the war records of the following veterans is required. James Martin, John Hoover, Ally Hales, and P. A. Snyder. The company and regiment is especially desired. Please give information to any member of the Curwensville American Legion.

Their Food in Bark.

Chickadees and nuthatches keep trees alive and healthy by eating the eggs and larvae in the crevices of the bark, says Nature Magazine. of federal-state pohibition enforcement; and in the third, he filled the first engagement in the speaking tour he plans over the state for this month.

The new salary arrangements are, of course, going to create a terrific rumpus in state politics. There is something that strikes close to home. Outside the technical and professional positions in the state government, which politicians do not care very much about because they seldom have applicants for them, there are thousands of job-holders who are close to the hearts of the county organizations throughout the state.

There is no question whatever that the inequalities of salary which the Governor complains of actually exist. That can be laid partly to natural conditions and partly to politics. Where natural conditions enter would be, for instance, in a case wheer an employe has been working a number years for a certain department and has been advanced in salary without change of title.

Where politics enter would be in the cases where powerful political leaders have been able to secure preferential treatment for favored employes. It should never be forgotten that department heads depend for the appropriations with which to carry on their work upon votes in the Assembly, and that the temptation always is to extend favors to leaders whose good will will secure them votes in the Assembly.

The leaders know this as well as the department heads do, which is why they are able to advance the fortunes of employes in whom they are interested. This condition having prevailed over a length of years, there have inevitably grown up conditions of favoritism. And now, when these conditions are exposed and treated, the nerves jump vigorously and there is going to be a great deal of rumpus before the thing is over.

The Governor's action in starting the prohibition war in Philadelphia, while it is not technically politics, will practically find its reactions there.

The whole country will watch the result, because Mr. Pinchot is being considered as a presidential possibility more on his record for prohibition effort than on anything else. If he should succeed in absolutely closing up all the saloons, his name will come to the Republican National Convention with more weight than it had before. If he fails, the damage will be the greater.

In the tour which he began with a speech in Reading this week, the Governor may tell more about all that before he is through. He did not go far in his first speech, merely making the statement that nothing had been done to make him less committed to the people's interests than when he went into office. When he gets to the details, the fur may begin to fly.

LLOYD GEORGE OFF TO CANADA AFTER VISIT TO GOTHAM

New York, Oct. 6.—After less than 24 hours in New York, Lloyd George today started for Montreal on the second lap of his tour of the United States and Canada. His special train pulled out of the Grand Central station at 8:48 a. m.

The first lap ended last midnight when the little Welch dynamo retired after a day crammed with incidents, including two speeches, a procession through the city, a luncheon, two audiences with the press, and a [illegible] olay where he attracted more attention than the actors.

Seven and one-half hours sleep sufficed. At 7:30 a. m. Lloyd George was up, eager to go on with his trip. He breakfasted at the Waldorf hotel and then started to the Grand Central station. His train is due to reach Montreal at 9:50 p. m. A daylight trip was arranged so that the British premier could see the Hudson River palisades, West Point, the Adirondacks and other points of interest enroute to Montreal.

Japanese Women's Pillows.

The wooden pillows found in the tomb of old King Tut-Ankh-Amen by Egyptologists recently resemble the wooden pillows in use today in Japan. It must be difficult to find any sleep inducing virtue in these so-called cushions and one must be much determined to sleep to be able to do so under the conditions. The reason for the hard substance of these pillows is explained by the imperative necessity of not disarranging the complicated headdress of the Japanese women. Only the women of the middle class still use these hard pillows as they do their hair only once a month and cannot wait to sleep until between times.

English Influence.

One day an old Kurdish chief, with a heavily armed escort, rode into the grounds of the British legation in Teheran, Persia. He had a little grandson with him, "a richly dressed boy of about nine who, in addition to a dagger and sword, had a couple of the most up-to-date revolvers stuck in his belt." The old chief wanted to send his grandson to Harrow school in England. The matter was discussed through an interpreter, "and after countless compliments and expressions of thanks, the wild-looking horsemen, with the old chief and the boy at their head, rode away."

The Future.

The future of poetry. . . is immense, because in poetry where it is worthy of its high destinies, our race, as time goes on, will find an ever surer and surer stay.—Matthew Arnold.

You Tell Them.

Though awkward and inconvenient, the washtub in the middle of the kitchen floor served its purpose as amply as the porcelain and plumbed one now.

Power to Be Harnessed.

The demand for electrical energy is increasing by such leaps and bounds that every available power source is being tapped. Geysers and artesian wells have been called upon to do their share towards furnishing light and power. The only sources of energy as yet elusive to man's efforts to claim them for power-producing purposes are the sun's rays and the ocean's waves. Necessity being the mother of invention, man will eventually find a way to harness these valuable forces also.

Tom Sims SAYS---

Great news for husbands today. In Norristown, Pa., a male cabaret dancer got arrested.

Brewery seized in Philadelphia. Let them seize. Nobody wants to drink beer in winter.

Laundry girls rescued an Erie (Pa) fireman, perhaps to pull the buttons off his shirt.

Blackmailers are after a Chicago hotel man. They may know where he gets his hotel steaks.

Perhaps some Indiana cop broke a mirror. Anyway, a robber dodged them seven years.

A poet got married in Boston so he might as well begin writing odes to canned beans.

Bad news from Cuba. Revolution threatened. Hope some nickel cigars get broken in fights.

China may unite against her bandits. Then the bandits may start coal mines in America.

United States Mint employes are asking for more money even though they are making millions.

Hagerstown (Md) squire was arrested for swearing at instead of swearing in a witness.

Los Angeles girl says she shot her husband. She is so good looking they may not believe her.

FANS SHOULD STEP UP FRONT IF THEY WANT WORLD SERIES

The baseball World Series will be held in New York City again this year, the New York Nationals having again won the National League pennant, while the New York Yankees also copped their third American League championship

The baseball classic opens on Wednesday, Oct. 10th, at 2 o'clock and will continue daily, weather permitting, until one team has won four games, as but seven games are to be played this year.

There is the keenest rivalry between the two teams and history is repeating itself as the New York fans have made the Yankees the favorite in the betting. They also say, as they did last year that the Yanks have wizard moundsmen while the the Giant's pitchers are "all shot" However, the National League winners have "Fighting Jawn" McGraw and his brains on their side and that combination is quite a bolster to any pitching staff, be the same "all shot" or only "half shot" Our hopes are pinned on the Yanks but we're not going to bet any money on it

Some of the fans are interested in getting report of the games and if enough of them feel that way an effort will be made to secure the Globe Theatre and string a Western Union wire into same for the purpose of getting the games play by play. This has been done the past couple of years by "Red John" Lister, who has always come out in the hole financially in the venture and if the fans want this service this year, they will have to guarantee the cost of the service before "Red" will again take up the "white man's burden."

If you are interested in getting the games play by play drop into Healey's pool room or see "Red" and obligate yourself or guarantee a dollar toward the cost of the service. If enough to pay the wire expense and theatre rent is guaranteed the service will be secured, otherwise there will be nothing doing this year. Don't overlook this if you want the games.

Cocks and Cheats.

In Norway a cock is taken to the bout which searches for the body of a diffused person. The cock is expected to crow when passing over the body In Persia the crowing of a cock is the signal for one event affecting the family and the master of the house has ens to feel the bird's feet If they are cold it is a premonition of death but if they are warm the sign is propitious and the master rejoices in coming good fortune

SINCERITY ESSENTIAL IN PLAYING COMEDY

"To the spectator there seems to be no difference in playing comedy or any ordinary play, but to the player there is a world of difference," says Jack Norworth who comes to the Driggs Theatre, for one night only, Friday, October 12, in his latest success "Honeymoon House."

"In comedy the feeling that must be sent over the footlights to the audience is one of infinite truth into the play. If that feeling is not engendered from the start, the effort of the player will fail. The spectator wants to do the laughing and it is in that mood that he comes to see the play. If he feels at the moment that you are not going to give him the opportunities to laugh at your complicated which make trouble for you, you may be sure that your efforts will go for naught. It is therefore a prime essential that the seriousness which makes the playing of a Shakespearean tragedy should also mark the playing of comedy."

In "Honeymoon House" Messrs Emil Nyitray and Herbert Hall Winslow, who are responsible for the book have afforded Jack Norworth a rare opportunity to show his ability as a comedian.

Yes, he sings his new songs in "Honeymoon House" with Miss Adelphi at the piano.

Spent Fifty Years Writing Faust

Nearly fifty years passed from the day Goethe began writing his dramatic poem, Faust, until the last part had been completed for the printer, some work on the poem having been done each year of that long time, with many revisions and rearrangements The last part of the working was completed shortly before his death in 1832.

ANNUAL RED CROSS MEETING HERE MONDAY

Red Cross workers should bear in mind that the annual meeting of the Clearfield Chapter Red Cross will be held at the High School auditorium on Monday, Oct. 8th at 4 o'clock. At this meeting a chairman and the entire executive committee are to be named Be present.

Ostrich Plumes Costly

Ostrich feathers gathered by hand or cut from the wings whence come the most valuable plumes The annual feather crop of the average ostrich is worth from forty to sixty dollars The birds yield a crop of valuable feathers every seven months, although some breeders confine the plucking to a single harvest a year, as they claim that in this way they get better quality.—Nature Magazine.

Starching.

History verifies the fact that the practice of starching, which came in fashion in England in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, was invented by a Spanish woman about the middle of the Fifteenth century. She wished to hide a blemish on her neck with an enormous ruff.

Are Your Kiddies' Eyes What They Should Be?

Are your kiddies' eyes in the shape they should be for the strain that the school year puts on them? They will be under more or less of a strain until school closes next year and this year's work is very important.

Have glasses fitted to the kiddies' eyes that will make reading and seeing easy. I'm fitting that kind every day.

HIGHWAY DEPT. HAS SURPRISES READY FOR LAW VIOLATORS

Patrol of Mounted Officers Is About Ready; Have Your Lamps All Trimmed and Burning.

MEANING BUSINESS

Harrisburg, Oct. 6. (United Press)—There will be some surprises in store for motorists who defy regulations of the Highway Department and the motor vehicle laws of the state, if they are laboring under the delusion that the new highway patrol has no power, according to Secretary Paul D. Wright.

As long as the Highway Department has supervision of the registration of motor cars, sufficient power can be vested in the highway patrol to keep the highways free from recklessness, and lawlessness, "speed merchants" and road "hogs," it was said at the highway department today.

Any one of the 10,000 employes of the State Highway Department can be deputized by Secretary Wright to serve notice on violators of the rules of driving under the new law, it was stated, and for sufficient cause the license of the driver can be revoked. This penalty, if applied in cases where indifference is shown, it was pointed out, will soon rid the roads of the menace to automobile driving at the present time.

The inconsiderate driver who "bumps off" a passing machine and escapes unharmed will not escape under the rigid supervision to be exercised by the new force of patrolmen under Secretary Wright. Safety will be strictly observed because, according to Wright "the highways will be unsafe places for violators of the law."

State Troops are training the highway patrol at the school in Colebrook near Mt. Gretna. Nearly a hundred men are taking the course to equip them in the methods used by special police. Within a few weeks they will be ready for action.

Some of the infractions of highway regulations to be specially observed are: Parking along improved sections of the state highway; passing other vehicles on hills and curves; lamps out of focus or with high candlepower overloaded trucks; unlicensed operators drivers who prevent operation of two-way traffic and those who drive under the influence of liquor.

Measles and Whooping Cough Giving Concern To Health Department

There were six cases of measles, five of whooping cough and one of scarlet fever reported to the local Board of Health during the past seven days, according to the report of Health Secretary J. S. Gaulin.

There was one death during the week as the result of an attack of whooping cough.

There are at the present time a total of thirty-seven cases of communicable diseases under quarantine in the town. Of this total twenty-seven are whooping cough. These cases are located as follows:

1st Ward—Whooping Cough, 7.

2nd Ward—Typhoid fever,1; Scarlet Fever, 1; Diphtheria, 1; Whooping Cough, 2.

3rd Ward—Scarlet Fever,1;Whooping Cough 13.

4th Ward—Measles, 6; Whooping Whooping Cough, 5.

LAUGHMAN—DIVELY

James E. Baughman, of Osceola Mills, and Miss Emma Dively, of Karthaus, were married on Saturday September 29th. The wedding took place at the Methodist parsonage in Bellefonte, Rev. E. E. McKelvey performing the ceremony. Both are popular young people, and will have the best wishes of their many friends.

R. H. Sterling, of Osceola Mills, Pa., formerly Superintendent of the Osceola Silica & Fire Brick Co., has accepted a position with the United States Refractories Co. and expect to locate in Clearfield in the near futur.

FOURTH ASSAULT ON THREE MURDERERS PROVES A FAILURE

Eddyville, Ky., Oct. 6.—Soldiers attempting to drive three convicts from their stronghold in the penitentiary today launched a fourth campaign of machinegun and rifle fire against the crumbling walls of the state prison mess hall where the men are barricaded.

Preparations for blasting the prisoners from their fortress with dynamite were broken off under orders from the State Board of Charities and Corrections. The attacking force directed their fire at a large breach in the north end of the two-story mess hall. Their chief hope of ending the siege today is that they may be able to batter the walls in upon the convicts.

Intermittent fire came from the dining hall at dawn today. Prison authorities state they believe two of the convicts are either dead or seriously wounded. Military rule was in force at the prison this morning. The declaration followed the visit of the Charities Board here last night. Reporters were barred from their press room inside the walls. News bulletins were given out at the prison gates.

Warden John Chilton said members of his staff claimed to have seen inside of the upper floor of the mess hall with field glasses. One of the convicts was said to have been seen moving about the room. Two other men were lying on the floor.

The ring surrounding the small fortress into which Monte Walters, Lawrence Griffith and Harry Farland fled early Wednesday morning, after killing three guards and wounding another in a break for liberty, was increased to 50 men during the night.

MORE SALOONMEN IN PHILADELPHIA GIVE UP TO DRY RULING

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.—Threats of criminal prosecution and "padlock injunctions against saloons which have continued to operate in defiance to "go out of business" notices, signed by United States Attorney General Daugherty and State Attorney General Woodruff, resulted in the voluntary closing of more barrooms today.

Approximately 50 of Philadephia's 1,300 saloons have heeded the warning to dismantle their bars, remove swinging doors and close up.

PUNXSY MAN NAMED TO THE P. S. C. BY GOV. PINCHOT

Harrisburg, Oct., 5.—Lex N. Mitchell, a prominent attorney of Punxsutawney, yesterday was appointed as a member of the Public Service Commisison by Governor Pinchot to serve a ten year term.

Mr. Mitchell's appointment will have to be confirmed by the Legislature of 1925. The new commissioner will take the place of John S. Rilling, of Erie, whose term expired.

Two other vacancies exist on the commission, that of Milton J. Brecht, of Lancaster, term expired, and that of John W. Reed, of Clearfield, who will continue until his successor is named.

STATE POLICEMAN FRUSTRATES JAIL DELIVERY AT YORK

York, Pa., Oct. 6.—Another outbreak in the York county prison in an attempted jail delivery was frustrated early today by state police.

A number of the prisoners, recently transferred from the Eastern Penitentiary owing to crowded conditions there, succeeded in getting from the third floor tier to the fourth floor of the jail.

Sergt. Walter Stillwell, of the state police, discovered one of the convict crawling through a window where the bars had been sawed. Others were discovered in the act of escaping and they were forced back at the point of drawn revolvers.

HEADLESS MAN IS IDENTIFIED AS A KITTANNING YOUTH

Pittsburgh, Oct. 6.—Positive identification of the South Side murder victim, who was beheaded, as Charles McGregor, formerly of Kittanning, was made today at the county morgue.

R. H. Bixby of Pittsburgh, a former employer of McGregor, and Mark Williams, a clerk in the Internal Revenue office at the Federal building both identified the body as that of McGregor. Neither Bixby nor Williams could throw any light on the murder mystery, which was uncovered when the headless body was found in a girl's dressing room at the South Side municipal swimming pool last Wednesday.

Both Bixby and Williams characterized McGregor as a youth of "roving" disposition.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 6.—"That is my son."

J. E. McGregor, special patrolman at Mesta Machine Company, West Homestead, thus made positive identification of the South Side headless [illegible] of Charles "Chuck" McGregor of Kitanning, Pa.

The father said he had not heard from his son for several months. The last he heard of him he was in Detroit. His son was 21 years old, the father said.

McGregor could throw no light on the murder. In fact he said he had no knowledge his son was in this section of the country.

Five other persons, four chums of the slain youth and a former employe of Kittanning, also identified the body as that of McGregor.

The first clue as to the probable identity of the victim was furnished by Miss Inda West of Punxsutawney, at present a student nurse at Jefferson hospital, Philadelphia. She identified copies of photographs found in the clothing as ones she had sent to McGregor in Detroit several months ago.

County Controller Grant Thompson Seriously Ill; Stricken Last Evening

The many friends throughout the county of County Controller Grant H. Thompson will be grieved to learn that he suffered a paralytic stroke last evening and is quite seriously ill at his home on Front street. One side is completely paralyzed and he had not regained consciousness up to noon today.

Mr. Thompson returned last evening on the 6:45 Pennsylvania train from the state convention of County Commissioners at Washington, Pa., where he had been since Tuesday. He had reached the walk turning into his home off the main sidewalk when felled by the stroke.

Mrs. Thompson, not expecting her husband home until a later train, had gone to the picture show and upon returning along about 9 o'clock found Mr. Thompson lying in the yard along side the walk. He was taken into the home and a physician summoned but despite all that medical skill could do he remains in a rather serious condition.

His many friends hope to learn of Mr. Thompson's speedy recovery.

VICTIM OF PECULIAR ACCIDENT

DR. RACHEL READ WRITES RELATIVES, TELLING OF QUAKE

Dr. Rachel Read, sister of Mrs. M. J. Owens, A. H. and Samuel C. Read, who has long been located in Japan, and who lost all her possessions in Tokio during the earthquake, fire and tidal wave, but who escaped personal injury by reason of having been out of the city at her country home in the mountains, wrote the following letter to Mrs. Owens, which was received today:

Wednesday, Sept. 5, 1923.

Dear Sister and all my family:

Whether this ever reaches you or not I cannot be sure, but will write anyway, for I am sure your papers are telling you of the awful earthquake and fire, and you will be yearning to know details. I am safe and sound here, and grateful for a roof and food, but everything I possessed in Tokyo has gone up in smoke. It is San Francisco over again only if anything worse. The quake here in Karizawa was awful. Will write as soon as I can get it away. A messenger is waiting to carry this to Kobe, the nearest point we can post anything to the U. S. A.

Yokohama is nearly all demolished and burned. Ships are carrying those who are left to Kobe. There is no way to get between Tokyo and Yokohama except to walk.

No railway south of Tokyo until you get to Numazu. The soldiers have taken possession of Tokyo and are doing all they can to clear away the dead, care for the wounded and provide food for the living.

I am a little dazed, as yet. I do not know what to do, but when I can get my finances straightened up I will go home. Of course I will not go to India and Europe as I wrote you last week, but when or if at all, one can get any money remains to be seen. In the meantime we will stay here, and as there is no 23 Reinanzaka (her Tokyo address) any more, I suppose the mail will continue to be sent here. I am not sure whether the central post office was burned or not.

Poor Koma (Dr. Reed's maid) does not know what has become of her family. They lived in Tsukiji and it is entirely swept by fire. She has kept up until today, when she has given away, poor soul.

We just watch the bulletin board for news, and if anyone who ventured into Tokyko returns we surround him like vultures—news vultures. Dr. Reischauer went down to Tokyo to see about Mrs. McNair and Miss Wes. Found them all right and not burned out.

The Meiji Gakuin and Joshi Kakuin are both saved, but the American embassy and all about it are burned.

The Episcopal mission has suffered the most, as their schools, hospitals and cathedral are all gone in Tsukiji (pronounced Skoo).

I could write on and on, but will stop now and as I know more definitely will write again. Kindly send this on to the rest of the family and tell them I will write them soon.

With love,

RACHEL.

The earthquake occurred at 12 o'clock, Saturday, Sept. 1st.

GYPSIES PLAY OLD GAME HERE BUT ARE CAUGHT BY QUICK CHASE OVER HIGHWAYS; STOLE $27.00 IN GARAGE

A gang of gypsies under the leadership of Steve Zibo, of 316 Holster street, Chicago, according to the county license he holds, which has been through this section several times the past summer, a part of which outfit was on the carnival midway at the Fair, dropped into the Studebaker garage on Daisy street last evening about 6:45 for the ostensible purpose of buying five gallons of gasoline. The whole gang crowded into the office of the garage and remained there while Mr. Estep was securing the gas at the curb pump.

When placing the money received for the gas in the cash register, which was located in the office, Mr. Estep saw the register had the appearance of having been sifted out by a hurricane. Quickly checking up the register the garage man found it was $27 short.

Mr. Estep immediately got in touch with Chief of Police McMullen and told the chief what had happened. Chief McMullen got busy and notified the officers of all surrounding towns and learning that the gypsies had left Clearfield in the direction of DuBois, Chief McMullen, Officer Woolridge and Mr. Estep started out in a car in pursuit of them. They ran out to the Reams watering trough but were unable to find any trace of them. A party of DuBois people happened along about this time and they gave the officers the location of the gypsy camp, which was on the Curwensville-Grampian detour at the Porter farm.

The party then made their way back to the camp and routed out four men and one woman Mr. Estep identified as having been in the office just before he discovered the loss of his money. The gypsies protested their innocence but when told they would have to come back to Clearfield, Zibo weakened and produced the $27 Mr. Estep claimed to have lost.

There was a bunch of eight or ten children in the outfit and believing their room was much to be preferr to their company Chief McMullen decided not to make any arrests, but notified Zibo to stay away from Clearfield in the future as their arrest would follow their appearance in the town, even traveling through.

GIRLS NEGLECTED

HELD AS WITNESSES

The following article is taken from the Huntingdon Daily News and explains in part at least why the health and police authorities of the state condemn the disreputable carnival aggregations which prey upon the pocketbooks, morals and public health of the few communities they are yet allowed to infest in Pennsylvania:

County detective W. L. Hoover and Chief of Police O. G. Garner conducted raids on two rooming houses in Huntingdon this morning at 4 o'clock and arrested Richard Brown, 21, Warren, Pa; Arthur Feltman, 30, New York City; Henry Pierce, 35, Erie; William Wright, 24, East Liverpool, Ohio; Helen Lucas, 15, Winburne; Clara Shaffer, 18, Clearfield; Betty Davis, 16, Munson; Marie Brickley, 15, Beibtown.

The double quartet dropped into the town the fore part of this week with the carnival now exhibiting in Smithfield. The girls were enticed away from home while the carnival was playing at the Clearfield Fair last week.

Arthur Feltman and Marie Brickley were passing under the assumed names of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jones; Richard Brown and Betty Davis, Henry Pierce and Clara Shaffer, and William Wright and Helen Lucas also were posing as man and wife.

The arrests were the result of information obtained by the officers, since their arrival in Huntingdon.

The girls were without coats and hats, and [illegible] wearing apparel, and [illegible] bundle.

A hearing was held this morning at 9:30 before Squire Lowe. Kirk and [illegible] were bounded over to the next term of court on the charge of enticing young girls away from home for immoral purposes. Additional charges of adultery will be brought against Feltman and Pierce, it having been brought out at the hearing that they are married men.

The girls are being detained as material witnesses.

ROTARIANS DAVIS AND HILE TO VISIT HIGH SCHOOL TUES.

The Rotary Club at its last meeting having decided to accept the invitation cuered by Prof Diener, principal of the High School, and City Supt. Zerfoss to visit the High School, President Stewart evolved a plan yesterday for selecting the members whose duty it will be to make a weekly trip to the school. It was decided to select two Rotarians each week for this work.One will be called upon to speak to the school, while it will be the duty of the other one to visit and inspect the manual training and domestic science departments and make report on same at the next club meeting. None will be excused and everyone must serve when called upon or drafted for this really worth-while service.

In making his selections the president had the names of all the members written on slips of paper, placed them in a hat and then had the two "lucky ones" pulled out.

Next week's assignment fails to Pearl T. Davis and Thornton Hile. Davis is scheduled to do the Demosthenes act, while Hile will carefully inspect the different departments of the High School and report at the next meeting of the club.

Guardsmen Withdrawn In Walton's War Against State's Fancied Enemies

Oklahoma City, Okla., Oct. 6.—Demobilization of national guardsmen on duty in Oklahoma City where Governor Walton has concentrated his military law battle with the Ku Klux Klan, was announced today by Acting Adjutant General Charles Barrett.

Dismissal of the troops does not mean there has been any change made in the status of the state-wide martial law, Barrett said.

Guards will be maintained only in those cities where military courts are in session, it was explained. Soldiers here were withdrawn during the night.

ODD FELLOWS TO MEET IN CLEARFIELD NEXT YEAR

The Allegheny Region Anniversary association, I. O. O. F. held the second quarterly meeting of its third fiscal year at Johnstown on Wednesday evening, October 3rd, with about 400 delegates present from the eleven counties covered by the association. It was not only a pleasant occasion but good work was accomplished. Clearfield was selected for the January meeting.

"I WAS GIVEN BLUE TABLETS," SAID MRS. WEBB BEFORE DEATH

New York, Oct. 6.—"I was given blue tablets." These last words of Mrs. Gertie Gorman Webb, uttered shortly before she died of a mysterious malady, will be placed before the White Plains Grand Jury, which is investigating to decide whether she was murdered, it was learned today.

Dr. Wm. J. Meyer, who attended Mrs Webb in her final illness, is expected to go before the Jury next Monday and repeat the death bed conversation he had with the woman.

The report of Dr. Alexander G. Gettler, the toxicologist who examined Mrs. Webb's organs for indications of poison, resulted in discovery of mercury in the liver, brain and kidneys. Dr. Gettler however could not state definitely if this poison caused death as it was in very small quantities. Furthermore, he could not say positively if it was bichloride of mercury. Dr. Gettler's report has been place before District Attorney Arthur Rowland of Westchester County, who is examining it in detail. He will submit it to the Grand Jury later.

Doctor Yeaney returned last evening from a professional visit to Baltimore.

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By J. D. C.

The Pennsylvania State Highway Department aims to keep a much closer tab on the improved highways of the State in the future than has been the case in the past, if one is to judge from an order recently promulgated by State Highway Commissioner Wright and which is scheduled to go into effect October 15th.

It is the plan of the Highway Commissioner to keep close supervision of the highways in order that the number of accidents on same may be reduced to the lowest possible level.

The chief instrument to be used in this supervisory work is the new Highway Patrol, better known as Wright's "Eunuch Cavalry" the "mounted patrol" asked for by Highway Department which was "dehorned" by the "wets" in the Legislature, who were able to strike out of the bill creating the patrol all power or authority to make arrests. The Highway Patrol are therefore able to watch and tell on anybody violating the rules, but they can't do anything themselves hence the sobriquet "Eunuch Patrol"

The patrol will be made up of hard-riding loud cursing, prying-into individuals who will keep tab on all violations of the motor law, such as speeding, passing another car on a curve, parking on State road driving without lights, with but one light, or without a drivers' license. Names and license numbers of all offenders will be taken by the "Eunuchs" and turned over to the State police or some other officer who can properly function and arrest in all cases will follow:

In addition to this unique organization, all the "potato bug" and "Japanese beetle" and "dog tax" policemen now infesting the State, will also be authorized to guard and supervise the highways, when the potato bugs, beetles and taxless canines are not devouring the proletariat, these latter individuals having power to arrest violators of the traffic laws on sight.

In addition to the above new angles in the Department's campaign to make Pennsylvania's highways safe for democracy and our large Republican majority, every employe of the Highway Department is appointed on a sort of "smelling committee" and it will be their duty to smell out every accident on the highway and report same at once, with all the details to the Highway Department at Harrisburg

The State Police, as usual, will be the chief supervisors of the highway in the matter of looking after violators of the law. The new regulations should accomplish untold good and be the means of saving many lives. They should have the support of all good citizens.

Through the efforts of the Cook Forest association, composed of prominent men and women of the state, the Cook tract of 8,000 acres ,of which 200 acres is covered with virgin white pine, the one species of tree indigenous to Pennsylvania, will be presented to the state and preserved.

This tract of trees, which lies at the meeting point of Clarion, Jefferson and Forest counties, is the last considerable stand of the virgin white pine trees east of the Rocky Mountains. For years efforts have been made to have the legislature purchase this land, but the state has not seen its way clear to provide the necessary appropriation.

Notices are being sent out from the office of the state game commission at Harrisburg relative to the hunting hours, hours for the sport being announced. The notice follows:

"Under the old law shooting or hunting between sunset and sunrise, except for raccoons, was specifically prohibited. The Legislature saw fit to extend the hours of shooting in the new game code, and under the new law it is legal to hunt for or kill wild turkeys only between sunrise and sunset, and all other kinds of game may be hunted for and killed from one half hour before sunrise until one-half hour after sunset. Raccoons may be hunted at any time during the night.

Oysters change their sex three or four times a year, and frequently oftener, according to investigations which the Danish scientist, Spaarck made at the Limfjord experimental station. The Danish investigator has discovered that the phenomenon is brought about by changes in the temperature of the water in which the bivalves live. His conclusions are said to have been corroborated in the main by experiments made at Plymouth by Orton, an English scientist. Who wants to be an oyster?

HIGH—BAILEY

Leroy A. High and Miss Elsie Sarah Bailey, highly popular local young people, were unitted in the holy bonds of matrimony at the First Methodist church in McConnellsburg, Pa. at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Harry Jarrett, a friend of the groom

The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Orin C. Frank, of Clearfield, Mrs. Frank being a sister of the bride. Following the ceremony the happy couple departed by automobile for a short wedding trip after which they will be at home to their friends at 121 Weaver street.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Minerva High, of New Millport, and a dependable young man, holding a responsible position with Kurtz Bros. His bride is a daughter of Mrs. J. L. Bailey of West Fifth Avenue. She held the position of stenographer at the Clearfield National Bank for a number of years, and is one of Clearfield's finest young women. May health, wealth and happiness be their portion is the wish of the happy young couple's legion of friends.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Rustice Higby, attorney and friend of Ranger, assists in the search. Jasper Charlie, adventurer, and life-long friend of Loring, comes with a message from Hope's abductors. It is sent to Charlie with instructions to tell his friend to buy a hat for Hope and leave it at a specified place.

Charlie tells Loring that his daughter is in the hands of a group of criminals called the Combine. Frank Bryan is Ranger's private secretary. George Kelsey is detained at a private sanitarium.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

It was disappointing for Kelsey to find that he had only a stray sheet of a Sunday supplement two or three weeks old, entirely taken up with the disappearance of a girl called Hope Ranger and illustrated with pictures of her reproduced from photographs, paintings and sketches.

The sense of some one being near him rather than the perception of an actual presence roused him finally from his brown study.

A girl was standing a few feet away from him, regarding him steadily, her hands clasped before her.

The involuntary smile of recognition died on his lips as he stood up. He had thought at first—a resemblance only, but to whom? Where had he seen—recently? He grasped it. One of the nurses, Miss Copely. He had talked to her the day before.

But he had now a swift impression of grace and charm, of a distinction which the nurse did not possess.

"Good morning," he broke the silence which was becoming awkward. "For a moment I thought you were Miss Copley."

"Did you?" she asked vaguely. Her voice confirmed the impression of charm. It was warm, faintly vibrating.

"Miss Copely is a nurse here," he explained. "She resembles you very much. I thought she might be your sister."

She came nearer him and sat down on the bench, motioning him to resume his seat.

"Are you a patient here, too?"

Kelsey had an uncertain temper which he had taught himself to control; but at her question a flare of anger swept over his face, which slowly congealed to an icy repression.

"Am I a patient?" He had turned in his seat, and she saw that the flame still lingered in his hot blue eyes. There were white dents about the corners of his mouth; his voice was rough; the inflections were satirical. "Well, that is as you look at it. I was house physician here for a few weeks. I resigned—for reasons. My resignation was accepted, and I packed my things and prepared to leave. I needed a car to take me to the station, as it was some distance. There were polite excuses—all the cars were in use. I started to walk, hoping I'd get a lift on the road, the gates were locked. I attempted to throw my bags over the wall and scramble after them. Two men closed in on me. I lost my head and struck out, but they were too much for me. Our superintendent had grown so fond of me, you see, that he couldn't bare to part. So he elevated me to the rank of patient. I am still here—for the present."

"That means—you intend to get away?" she leaned nearer him to whisper.

"I'm talking nonsense," he began stiffly; but she touched him lightly on the arm.

"Dr. Bristow is coming," she murmured. "Give me a pencil quick, and wait here. I will come back—if I can."

Wondering alike at the quick change in her manner and at the purpose of her request, he gave her the pencil, and she moved away, to stand listlessly turning it in her hands and looking vacantly before her.

The superintendent of the institution came striding across the lawn toward them.

As always, he was fastidiously dressed—a gray morning suit and a gray soft hat. The luster of a splendid black pearl shone in his mauve necktie.

"Well, Miss Copley"—he stopped before the girl and spoke in the sympathetic, slightly bantering tone of a physician to a convalescent patient—"this is better than moping over rejected manuscripts, don't you think?"

She still stared before her.

"He gave me this pencil," she said; "but he wouldn't give me any paper." She moved on droopingly toward the house.

"Good morning, Kelsey." Dr. Bristow's voice was low. It was said that he had never been heard to raise it above that modulated pitch. To do so was unnecessary; it was sufficiently authoritative without emphasis. "You have been making friends with Miss Copley, I see."

The remark was casual, but Kel-

SHE SAT DOWN ON THE BENCH, MOTIONING HIM TO RESUME HIS SEAT.

sey divined undercurrents.

"Is that her name?" he asked uninterestedly. "I thought it might be. Sisters?"

The doctor's eyes were on him.

"Yes—a sad case. Hopeless, I fear. She wanted to be a writer. I have seen some of her manuscripts. Pretty bad. There was one fair story, though, of a little seamstress who fell in love with an actor's picture. He played Mercutio. That was one of your favorite parts, I believe."

"You're in one of your inventive moods today," Kelsey said insolently.

"Have you entirely forgotten the hit you made in that part?" Bristow was now, as Kelsey expressed it to himself, baiting him for fair. "Can't you recall the duel scene where you stagger back into the arms of your supporters, the house still? 'Tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church door, but 'twill serve. A plague o' both your houses!' Then the thunders of applause."

Kelsey was a little pale from his effort at self-control, his mouth was rigid.

"Who that had ever lived through such an inspiring experience could forget it?" he murmured with exaggerated enthusiasm.

"Good!" Bristow's tone was gratified. "You are coming along nicely, my dear boy."

With a pleasant nod, he turned away and stepped back to the drive where his car was waiting.

Kelsey's face was black as he looked after him. Lost in his resentment and sense of injury, he had forgotten the girl. It was with a start that he realized that she had come back and was seating herself beside him.

"Give me some paper," she said imperatively.

Studying her, curious to see what she would say or do next, Kelsey took a note book from his pocket and, tearing out a few sheets, handed them to her.

She began to write—words, half-words, dots, dashes, anything. Her head was bent over the paper. Any one watching her would have thought her absorbed in her task. But, while she wrote, she talked in a rapid undertone.

"You are an actor," she said accusingly. "I overheard some of the things he said to you. Perhaps you were only acting when you spoke of him to me?"

"I never was an actor," he interrupted harshly. "That's Bristow's little game. I am what I told you, George Kelsey, a physician who has specialized in mental diseases. But who are you? That's more to the point just now. I made a snap diagnosis of you, when I saw you first, as a drug-addict—your pallor, your eyes. But they don't admit them here. Amnesia, then? That means your memory of past events is blotted out. Yet I don't believe, for all you say, that yours is even touched."

CHAPTER VIII

AN attendant making his leisurely rounds paused near the rustic bench on which Kelsey and the girl were sitting, and speculatively measured the distance between them and the wall with his eyes.

Kelsey recognized him as one of the men who had hindered his egress when he tossed his luggage over the gate and attempted to climb after it; and meeting that heavy, suspicious glance, lifted his brows and drooped his mouth simulating a bored and weary resignation which was further borne out by his inert, lounging attitude.

The attendant, remembering a painful bruise or so sustained in their brief but animated encounter, twinkled his small eyes, grinned and walked on, deriving a malicious pleasure from ignoring what he took to be Kelsey's S. O. S. call for relief.

The girl paid no attention to either of them. Her head bent over the note-book, she covered its pages with a racing pencil apparently oblivious to everything about her.

"He's gone," murmured Kelsey when the guard had moved out of ear-shot. "Now tell me."

"It's all rather confusing to me," she said at last, evidently hesitating to commit herself; "why I am at this place, I mean, and the reason for keeping me here, and all. And I would like to get things clear. Perhaps it would help, if you would tell me first what you are doing here?"

"Very well," he smiled quizzically; "since you prefer it that way. But if I stop short at any time, you'll understand that it's because some one is coming."

"I won't go into my first meeting with Bristow and all that." He talked rapidly and in short sentences, moving his lips as little as possible. "I came here as an assistant physician, and liked it. The place is splendidly run and up to date. An invaluable experience for me, for a little while anyway. Then one day—no need going into details now—I overheard a conversation between Bristow and a visitor. I didn't listen intentionally of course, but I was in such a position that I couldn't help it. This visitor was describing the theft of a lot of valuable jewels, and consulting Bristow about the best method of disposing of them. And Bristow made no bones about giving his assistance—on a fifty-fifty basis. He laid out a whole scheme, told the fellow just what to do, giving the names of persons and places."

He paused, as if expecting her to question his statement.

"It doesn't surprise me a bit," she said, drawing in her breath sharply. "Bristow discovered me, of course. He ended the conversation short, and sent the man away. He never turned a hair, I'll say that for him; he's great in an emergency. But his eyes, they went through me like a diamond drill."

LESSON FOR OCTOBER 7

ABRAHAM, A BLESSING TO THE WORLD

LESSON TEXT—Gen. 12:1-3; 18: 17-19; 15-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—"In Thee shall all families of the earth be blessed."—Gen. 12:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Being a Blessing to Others.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Man Who Became a Blessing to the World.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Abraham, a Religious Pioneer.

I. Abraham's Ancestors (Josh. 24:2, 14).

Abraham's people were idolaters. Very likely as a young man, he himself worshiped idols. Tradition furnishes us with some interesting stories touching his struggle against idolatry. At any rate his experience was such as to well qualify him to be the head of a people whose God was the Lord. He knew how hopelessly disastrous idolatry was to the morals of the people, and, therefore, would be able to lead them back to God.

II. Abraham's Call (Gen. 12:1, cf. Acts 7:2-3).

God came to him in Ur of the Chaldees and said unto him:

1. "Get thee out of thy country." One is tied to his country with a strong bond. Abraham had lived long enough to have formed strong attachments to his country.

2. "Get thee out from thy kindred." Abraham was not only to leave behind him his native land, but his relatives as well, even his father's house. Since his kindred were idolaters, he must leave them. Abraham was to become a pilgrim, to be without a home. Even in Canaan, the only land he ever owned, was a burial place.

3. "Into the land that I will show thee." He was not told what or where the land was. He went out not knowing whither he went (Heb. 11:8). While he dwelt in tents during his earthly sojourn, yet "he looked for a city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God" (Heb. 11:10). And thus he was a typical believer called out from his family and country, and renouncing idolatry, he walked by faith, testifying to his and succeeding generations to the faithfulness of God. It costs to obey God, but there is an abundant recompense.

III. God's Promise to Abraham (Gen. 12:2-3; 18:17-18).

1. The Father of a Great Posterity (v. 2). This has been literally fulfilled. He was not to go out primarily for what he could get, but for what he could do. The minister and missionary forget their own personal blessings in the supreme joy of their converts who are the fruits of their labor. No name in all history equals that of Abraham in its honorable influence. His is the name of honor among Jews, Mohammedans and Christians. They all acknowledge him as father.

2. A Blessing to Others (vv. 2, 3). He was not only to become great and to share God's blessings, but to be a blessing to others. He has become a blessing to countless multitudes. This is the prevailing law of the spiritual life—being blessed to be a blessing. Those who respond to this law become the very touchstone of God, so precious that God will bless them who bless them and curse those who curse them. God makes common cause with His people. So vitally is He one with them that it is a serious thing to mistreat them. To maltreat God's children is to lift the hand against God. No one who goes against Him can prosper. Not only is this so with reference to willful acts against His children but neglect or refusal to do good to them. Christ regards all acts for or against them as for or against Him.

IV. God Testing Abraham (Gen. 22:2-18).

Abraham's faith was shown in that he obeyed the call of God and left his land and kindred, but his faith reached its highest point in offering Isaac. For many years, he had waited for the fulfillment of God's promise as to his heir. At last that promise was a reality. Abraham's hope was not the ordinary hope which fills the heart of every father, that his name and work may be perpetuated through his son. A new nation and the world's Savior were to spring up from Abraham through this son. Through this great ordeal, his faith responded, enabling him to believe that God would give Isaac back from the dead (Heb. 11:17-19). God tries all His children. The more important, the more severe the trial.

Education.

The worst education that teaches self-denial is better than the best that teaches everything else and not that.—J. Sterling.

All Make Mistakes.

The world could easily get along without the man who never makes a mistake.

Warn Us From Vice.

All physical evils are so many bacon lights to warn us from vice.—Bowen.

Don't neglect that cough. Wenck's Glycerole of Tar and Wild Cherry will give relief without harmful dope or alcohol. 25c and 50c.

CHURCHES

TRINITY METHODIST CHURCH

South Second street.

Bible school, 9:30, with J. C. Arnold, superintendent, begins a quarter's study in missions, having Abraham for the first heroic adventurer. A beyond-the-church writer in the metropolitan secular press, when space thru a strike was almost exclusively valuable in the "Combined New York Newspapers," makes this calm, large appraisement of "The Missionary":

"I make no bones of saying that the Christian Missionary is about the most useful person in the world.

"He is the one figure that gives me the most hope for the world's future.

"The motive that actuates him is the only one I find in the multitude of human motives that gives promise of the eventual peaceable organization of the world."

Full session with missionary program by Superintendent H. B. Powell, Jr. Special offering—last year's $81.64 with 419 present. Report on Rally Day attendance by class percentages from enrollment. Extra music.

Worship—10:45 and 7:30. Expositions of scripture. Morning's study is on well known and oft repeated texts. Evening, a trenchant treatment of creed and deed. A forum study, preceding sermon, on "Crime"—requested.

In the evening worship, for the fall and winter, a forum period will be devoted to study of requested subjects.

Trinity church invites the strangers, week-end visitor, and commercial traveler to worship tomorrow. The ethic of church-going is the individual's definite support and endorsement of all the church represents and promotes. Share our worship this Sunday. Free sittings. Good music.

Business Situation In Pennsylvania Is Well Balanced Says Review

Harrisburg, Oct. 6. (United Press)—Retrenchment in certain industries of the state is causing a slight accumulation of labor on the market which as yet has not reached the stage of widespread unemployment, according to reports from employment offices to the Department of Labor and Industry today.

Orders have been falling off in the skilled trades, it is reported, but the demand for common labor is picking up again.

The calls for office and technical help have been falling off generally and the supply is far in excess of the demand.

Building activity has been brisk throughout the state, according to reports, in anticipation of the cold weather when the seasonal lull sets in.

There was no indication of depression in the employment reports, the situation being explained as balanced there being few calls for workers but not wholesale let outs in the basic industries.

The seasonal farm activity at this time of year has resulted in numerous placements, quite a few women having been sought for grape picking and other harvesting activities.

The mining of coal, both anthracite and bituminous, is now in full swing, the reports show. Bituminous miners are scarce and the demand cannot be filled but there has been no shortage of hard coal miners apparent, the situation in this case, having been interrupted by labor differences which have apparently been adjusted the collieries operating now at full capacity.

The transportation situation is reported normal. Some demand being experienced in Erie, Johnstown, Harrisburg and Scranton. The Pennsylvania Railroad general offices report their labor needs at present are zero.

While prosperity seems to be enjoyed by the wholesale and retail establishments at present, no indication is felt in clothing and manufacturing lines of the "seasonable demand" for goods. The reflection of this good business condition has apparently not reached the manufacturers in the form of orders as yet and when it does there is likely to be another spurt in the commodity lines.

Forms.

It is because of their rigorous form that the ballade and the rondeau have established themselves by the side of the sonnet; and the lyrist who has learned to love them finds in their rigidity no curb on his power of self expression. So in the kindred art of music, the sonata and the symphony are forms each with a law of its own, yet the composer has abundant liberty within the law.—Brander Matthews.

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of Heaven," sayeth the scriptures.

Rev. M. M. Snyder, who recently resigned his position as County Detective when his conference moved him out of the county, truly is following the call of the Master. Rev. Snyder, at the time he was County Detective, enjoyed a lucrative salary from the county. He also served his congregation and was paid by the church. When the call of duty came from another field, although it meant a sacrifice of well over a thousand dollars a year, he answered.

Rev. Snyder is made of the right stuff.

Once more the carnival has left its sordid trail through Clearfield County. How long will we demand the kind of amusement that is furnished by the traveling band of thieves, gamblers, bootleggers and moral lepers such as always attach themselves to the moving carnival?

That is a question that the people of the community themselves must solve. The State Department of Health is doing all it can to point the way. It does not have the co-operation of the agricultural associations of the state as it should.

Associations and celebration managers generally claim the public demands this form of amusement. Is this true?

If there is some agency through which the carnival can be cleaned up. Or better yet, cleaned out.

Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation has taken a step that should be followed by the owner of large acreages of land everywhere. The company holds 24,000 acres of land, much of which has been devoted to re-forestation. Up to this time it has planted 24,000 trees and have cut three million board feet of timber, being careful to take only full grown timber suitable to the use that it is to be put.

The slogan adopted is "No idle acres." Clearfield County has thousands of acres that ought to be put to work.

We are at the end of another busy week. A week full of activity.

Despite the fears entertained for the national weal, the sun shines, the moon still beams and the government reigns at Washington.

Even Oklahoma, which promised to become a seething cauldron of hatred and prejudice endangering the stabilization of government, turns out to be pretty level headed when a crisis appears on the horizon.

It will be ever thus. There isn't really much wrong with this grand old country, whether it be the nation at large, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma or Clearfield County; Maggie Stein to the contrary notwithstanding.

Political Paragraphs

ODELL HAUSER'S COLUMN

The political market has seemed during the present week to be recovering from the slump that generally sets in when an election brings the close to a period of campaigning. The primary election last month meant in most of the counties of Pennsylvania that electioneering was over for another year and the voters had nothing to do but sit back and confirm the result of the Republican contests. In a few counties, of course, those where there is a good Democratic vote or where an independent fight will be made, this rule does not hold. But those counties are the exception that proves the rule.

So the world of politics has been lethargic. But now it is beginning to spruce up a bit. There have been several incidents during the week that cause the politicians to prick up their ears.

One of them has been the general public'ion of the news that Senator George Wharton Pepper is anxious to get rid of his job as Republican National Committeeman from Pennsylvania. No one knows why he happened to choose this particular moment to let everyone know about it, but he did.

There is no tremendous news significance in that fact of itself. Those who know the inside of state politics know that Senator Pepper has for some time wanted to wish himself out of this particular job. For several months now, he has made no secret of his feeling, even if he has not exactly been shouting it from the house-tops.

He went into it in the first place merely as a stop-gap. Under the political conditions which prevailed, it happened that his being named National Committeeman was convenient because he was acceptable to all the Republican factions. Most other men who were thought of would have been opposed by somebody. This was the time that the Pinchot forces had just beaten the organization and they were somewhat inclined to jump over the traces, as was manifested by their attempt to defeat W. Harry Baker for State Chairman, in which they were unsuccessful.

The eyes of the factionalists centered on the office of Republican National Committeeman from Pennsylvania because of recent years it has been the habit for the National Committeeman to be the "boss" of Republican politics in the state.

So, even though it was recognized that with the death of Senator Penrose there could for the moment at least be no "boss" of Pennsylvania politics, the factionalists grew shy at the prospect when confronted with the tradition and were inclined to feel that if any leader of recognized standing were elected to the post, the very fact of his occupying it would tend to increase his prestige and give him too conspicuous a position of leadership.

It was probably this fact, or rather, a realization of how strong its working would be on the minds of the politicians in stiffening their opposition which led the Pinchot forces to abandon the attempt they had been committed to support their own candidate before the State Committee. It was generally understood they had a candidate and more than one shrewd guess has been made at his identity, but they did not bring him forward and the post went to Senator Pepper on the grounds above specified.

Senator Pepper, it is generally recognized, is no politician. He is, like Senator Knox was, interested in broader issues of statesmanship and dislikes the detail of routine politics, amidst which the National Committeeman must live as the representative of his state in national politics. That is why Senator Pepper seeks to get rid of the job, now that it is possible for him to do so.

And why does the Republican state organization deem it expedient to open the question now when it could not before? The answer to that is that in the recent primary elections the organization had a test of its solidarity in standing against the Governor and now believes that it can name the man it desires, regardless of how he may feel about it. So Senator Pepper's desire to open the question of a successor was complied with. It was considered safe to let him do it, where it would not have been so considered before election.

The fashionable thing to do, of course, is to speculate considerably on who will succeed Senator Pepper as National Committeeman. There is a lot of that being done. But if one stops to think that the interesting event does not occur until somewhere along next June, the speculative edge will be dulled for the more sensible. So much can happen between now and next June!

The National Committeeman is chosen by the members of the Republican State Committee. Odinarily the election comes when the Committee holds what is generally its one and only meeting, the meeting of organization that follows the election of the members at the May primary election of even-numbered years. Senator Pepper has announced that he will wait until that time before he separates himself from his job.

It will not, of course, hurt to list the names of the men who are "mentioned" for the impending vacancy. They include former Governor William C. Sproul, Joseph R. Grundy, W. C. Mellon of Pittsburgh, brother of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Senator William S. Vare of Philadelphia.

There is no doubt that Senator Pepper at the present moment would like to hand the position over to ex-Governor Sproul. But there is some doubt as to how Governor Sproul would feel about taking it. He was never distinguished by the desire to meddle in the detail of politics. And anyway, it is a long time before June and many a "dark horse" candidate may be unblanketed before the day comes.

While all this has been going on, Governor Pinchot has been stirring up the animals. There are at least three items of activity to be set down opposite his name on the roll-book. In the first place, he promulgated a very sweeping system of salary standardization in the state government; in the second, he descended upon 1300 saloons in Philadelphia with a new method

A BIRD, A BOY AND A GUN

By FLORENCE DAVILS

A twelve-year old boy and an air gun are a bad combination where birds set up their homes. And if the boy takes up his gun in open warfare against the robin or oriole that has perched in a green branch above his head, one of the little tragedies of the feathered folk is pretty sure to result. For boys are all too sure of aim in such a case, and the little shining-eyed, full-throated bright-hued creature that was singing his heart out to the sun a moment ago, becomes only a sodden huddle of blood-stained feathers.

If the bird world had its newspapers or bulletin boards, or even its town criers, there would haev been a wide commotion over a piece of news that crept into the world of daily print the other day.

For one of the boys who "didn't think"—or didn't care—paid dearly for his impulse to kill. He shot at a bird, the shot struck a stone, and rebounding, put out one of his own eyes.

Kipling, who wrote the song of Darzee, the tailor bird, would do justice to this odd meting out of retribution. "He though to kill me and deaden my heart beat and the sight of my eyes," the feathered chorister might have exulted. "Now the swift shining bullet has made dark one of his own eyes, so that he will go through life more slowly and cautiously, seeing the sun shine only in part; scarred forever by the shot meant to destroy me."

Cruelty, the child psychologists say, is a natural phase of the earliest years of life, when unreasoning instinct sways the little hands. But even the baby may be made to understand that there is a nursery law against causing needless pain and suffering.

Gardens for the little people, and the chance to become friendly with the birds and butterflies and squirrels that may be enticed among the flowers and trees are helping to make even our young airgun hunters think twice before pulling the trigger. May there be no more bright eyes blinded, either of boy or bird, in the days of better understanding.

WORLD DEMAND FOR AMERICAN MILK

Now distributed to 85 countries and colonies of the world. It has become permanently popular in the Orient. Our milk exports since 1914 over $400,000,000.

The American cow retains her popularity in the Orient despite the neglectful attitude of the Occident. Exports of milk to the Orient in the 7 months ending with August show a marked increase while those to other parts of the world show a decline of nearly one-third, measured in quantities. In the single month of July the milk exports to the Orient increased 60% compared with July of last year, while those to Europe showed a fall off of 35%.

While it was expected—hoped in fact—says the Trade Record of The National City Bank of New York that Europe would regain her ability to supply her own people with this important foodstuff, it is interesting to note that the growth in our exports of milk to the Orient continues, for it is in that part of the world that the demand for condensed and evaporated milk is a permanent one. Density of population and the necessary use of the soil for the production of grain foods leave the Orient, except India where the cow is considered a sacred animal, dependent upon the Occident for its milk supply. China with 400,000,000 people has but 22,000,000 cattle of all classes and a very small proportion utilized for dairy purposes; Japan with a population of over 50,000,000 has but 3½ million cattle of all classes; French Indo-China with 20,000,000 population has less than a quarter of a million cattle. India, where animal life and especially that of the cow is considered sacred by a large element of the population, has more cattle than any other country of the world despite density of population, the number of cattle in India, being, according to latest reports 130,000,000, or nearly double the number in the United States and five times as many as in Argentina, yet our exports of condensed and evaporated milk to India alone in the last five years aggregated over 60,000,000 pounds.

The wonderful development in recent years in the exportation of milk from the United States, in form available for instant and satisfactory use in any part of the world is illustrated by the fact that the total value of exports of milk, condensed or sweetened, evaporated, unsweetened, or reduced to "milk powder" totaled but about $17,000,000 in the decade preceding the war and has exceeded $400,000,000 in the decade since the beginning of the war. The whole world made the acquaintance of American condensed milk during the war period and liked it, and today our exports in the various forms above noted go to 85 different countries, colonies and islands of the world, and continue especially popular in that section of the world which must always import its milk, the Orient.

Joseph L. Dale, George street, who has been seriously ill for more than a week, was reported considerably improved yesterday morning.

Editor Joe Fullerton and the succulent bivalve are now sworn enemies so long as life do last. The other evening the editor attended a little family gathering on Bloomington avenue and partook of oysters as a diet. About midnight on his returned home he became ill and was confined to his home the balance of the week.

A "sock" social was held in the Grace Lutheran church last evening the event was as amusing as entertaining Each one was asked to contribute twice the amount of money as the size of the "sock" or stocking worn by the giver. Some contributions amounted to quite a large sum, it is needless to quote. The entertainment was quite out of line with the usual church socials and was greatly enjoyed by the more than average crowd which attended.

The announcement of the death of Mrs Margaret Spence, was announced Thursday evening at a late hour, occurring at her home on North Locust street Her demise did not come as a surprise to her many Curwensville friends, as she had been seriously ill for several weeks, yet it cast a shadow of sorrow round and about the community Deceased was born in 1838, a daughter of Thomas McAdams, who worked for Jno Patton for many years, and was of Scottish descent In the early seventies she became the second wife of James Spence who died Sept. 24, 1898 the first Mrs Spence Sarah J., passing away Dec 28, 1879

Mrs Margaret Spence, or "Mother Spence" as she was more familiarly called was a lady of rare christian virtue and attainment, having been a member of the Presbyterian church from early youth until her call came, "Well done thy good and faithful servant, come into the joy of the kingdom of the Lord. From the Altoona Mirror of Thursday we glean the following item of Blair county court news which will be of interest to Curwensville readers of the Progress, as one of the defendants was a former boy of this town:

"There were two cases of conspiracy against M Dow Kittleberger and Ed. J Sunderland These men, it was alleged, had made use of the proceeds of negotiable paper entrusted to them. The defendants were sentenced to make restitution within ten days and pay the costs" of federal-state pohibition enforcement; and in the third, he filled the first engagement in the speaking tour he plans over the state for this month.

The new salary arrangements are, of course, going to create a terrific rumpus in state politics. There is something that strikes close to home. Outside the technical and professional positions in the state government, which politicians do not care very much about because they seldom have applicants for them, there are thousands of job-holders who are close to the hearts of the county organizations throughout the state.

There is no question whatever that the inequalities of salary which the Governor complains of actually exist. That can be laid partly to natural conditions and partly to politics. Where natural conditions enter would be, for instance, in a case wheer an employe has been working a number years for a certain department and has been advanced in salary without change of title.

Where politics enter would be in the cases where powerful political leaders have been able to secure preferential treatment for favored employes. It should never be forgotten that department heads depend for the appropriations with which to carry on their work upon votes in the Assembly, and that the temptation always is to extend favors to leaders whose good will will secure them votes in the Assembly.

The leaders know this as well as the department heads do, which is why they are able to advance the fortunes of employes in whom they are interested. This condition having prevailed over a length of years, there have inevitably grown up conditions of favoritism And now, when these conditions are exposed and treated, the nerves jump vigorously and there is going to be a great deal of rumpus before the thing is over.

The Governor's action in starting the prohibition war in Philadelphia, while it is not technically politics, will practically find its reactions there.

The whole country will watch the result, because Mr. Pinchot is being considered as a presidential possibility more on his record for prohibition effort than on anything else. If he should succeed in absolutely closing up all the saloons, his name will come to the Republican National Convention with more weight than it had before. If he fails, the damage will be the greater.

In the tour which he began with a speech in Reading this week, the Governor may tell more about all that before he is through. He did not go far in his first speech, merely making the statement that nothing had been done to make him less committed to the people's interests than when he went into office. When he gets to the details, the fur may begin to fly.

LLOYD GEORGE OFF TO CANADA AFTER VISIT TO GOTHAM

New York, Oct. 6.—After less than 24 hours in New York, Lloyd George today started for Montreal on the second lap of his tour of the United States and Canada. His special train pulled out of the Grand Central station at 8:48 a. m.

The first lap ended last midnight when the little Welch dynamo retired after a day crammed with incidents, including two speeches, a procession through the city, a luncheon, two audiences with the press, and a [illegible] olay where he attracted more attention than the actors.

Seven and one-half hours sleep sufficed At 7:30 a. m. Lloyd George was up, eager to go on with his trip. He breakfasted at the Waldorf hotel and then started to the Grand Central station. His train is due to reach Montreal at 9:50 p. m. A daylight trip was arranged so that the British premier could see the Hudson River palisades, West Point, the Adirondacks and other points of interest enroute to Montreal.

English Influence.

One day an old Kurdish chief, with a heavily armed escort, rode into the grounds of the British legation in Teheran, Persia. He had a little grandson with him, "a richly dressed boy of about nine who, in addition to a dagger and sword, had a couple of the most up-to-date revolvers stuck in his belt." The old chief wanted to send his grandson to Harrow school in England. The matter was discussed through an interpreter, "and after countless compliments and expressions of thanks, the wild-looking horsemen, with the old chief and the boy at their head, rode away."

The Future.

The future of poetry. . . is immense, because in poetry where it is worthy of its high destinies, our race, as time goes on, will find an ever surer and surer stay.—Matthew Arnold.

You Tell Them.

Though awkward and inconvenient, the washtub in the middle of the kitchen floor served its purpose as amply as the porcelain and plumbed one now.

Power to Be Harnessed.

The demand for electrical energy is increasing by such leaps and bounds that every available power source is being tapped. Geysers and artesian wells have been called upon to do their share towards furnishing light and power. The only sources of energy as yet elusive to man's efforts to claim them for power-producing purposes are the sun's rays and the ocean's waves. Necessity being the mother of invention, man will eventually find a way to harness these valuable forces also.

FANS SHOULD STEP UP FRONT IF THEY WANT WORLD SERIES

The baseball World Series will be held in New York City again this year, the New York Nationals having again won the National League pennant, while the New York Yankees also copped their third American League championship

The baseball classic opens on Wednesday, Oct. 10th, at 2 o'clock and will continue daily, weather permitting, until one team has won four games, as but seven games are to be played this year.

There is the keenest rivalry between the two teams and history is repeating itself as the New York fans have made the Yankees the favorite in the betting. They also say, as they did last year that the Yanks have wizard moundsmen while the the Giant's pitchers are "all shot" However, the National League winners have "Fighting Jawn" McGraw and his brains on their side and that combination is quite a bolster to any pitching staff, be the same "all shot" or only "half shot" Our hopes are pinned on the Yanks but we're not going to bet any money on it

Some of the fans are interested in getting report of the games and if enough of them feel that way an effort will be made to secure the Globe Theatre and string a Western Union wire into same for the purpose of getting the games play by play. This has been done the past couple of years by "Red John" Lister, who has always come out in the hole financially in the venture and if the fans want this service this year, they will have to guarantee the cost of the service before "Red" will again take up the "white man's burden."

If you are interested in getting the games play by play drop into Healey's pool room or see "Red" and obligate yourself or guarantee a dollar toward the cost of the service. If enough to pay the wire expense and theatre rent is guaranteed the service will be secured, otherwise there will be nothing doing this year. Don't overlook this if you want the games.

Cocks and Cheats.

In Norway a cock is taken to the boat which searches for the body of a drowned person. The cock is expected to crow when passing over the body In Persia the crowing of a cock is the signal for one event affecting the family and the master of the house has ens to feel the bird's feet If they are cold it is a premonition of death but if they are warm the sign is propitious and the master rejoices in coming good fortune

SINCERITY ESSENTIAL IN PLAYING COMEDY

"To the spectator there seems to be no difference in playing comedy or any ordinary play, but to the player there is a world of difference," says Jack Norworth who comes to the Driggs Theatre, for one night only, Friday, October 12, in his latest success "Honeymoon House."

"In comedy the feeling that must be sent over the footlights to the audience is one of infinite truth into the play. If that feeling is not engendered from the start, the effort of the player will fail. The spectator wants to do the laughing and it is in that mood that he comes to see the play. If he feels at the moment that you are not going to give him the opportunities to laugh at your complicated which make trouble for you, you may be sure that your efforts will go for naught. It is therefore a prime essential that the seriousness which makes the playing of a Shakespearean tragedy should also mark the playing of comedy."

In "Honeymoon House" Messrs Emil Nyitray and Herbert Hall Winslow, who are responsible for the book have afforded Jack Norworth a rare opportunity to show his ability as a comedian.

Yes, he sings his new songs in "Honeymoon House" with Miss Adelphi at the piano.

Spent Fifty Years Writing Faust

Nearly fifty years passed from the day Goethe began writing his dramatic poem, Faust, until the last part had been completed for the printer, some work on the poem having been done each year of that long time, with many revisions and rearrangements The last part of the working was completed shortly before his death in 1832.

ANNUAL RED CROSS MEETING HERE MONDAY

Red Cross workers should bear in mind that the annual meeting of the Clearfield Chapter Red Cross will be held at the High School auditorium on Monday, Oct. 8th at 4 o'clock. At this meeting a chairman and the entire executive committee are to be named Be present.

Ostrich Plumes Costly

Ostrich feathers gathered by hand or cut from the wings whence come the most valuable plumes. The annual feather crop of the average ostrich is worth from forty to sixty dollars. The birds yield a crop of valuable feathers every seven months, although some breeders confine the plucking to a single harvest a year, as they claim that in this way they get better quality.—Nature Magazine.

Starching.

History verifies the fact that the practice of starching, which came in fashion in England in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, was invented by a Spanish woman about the middle of the Fifteenth century. She wished to hide a blemish on her neck with an enormous ruff.

Are Your Kiddies' Eyes What They Should Be?

Are your kiddies' eyes in the shape they should be for the strain that the school year puts on them? They will be under more or less of a strain until school closes next year and this year's work is very important.

Have glasses fitted to the kiddies' eyes that will make reading and seeing easy. I'm fitting that kind every day.
